Professor Artiukh T.O
Summary Agricultural foreign investment is an important way to make full use of the "two markets and two resources at home and abroad". Object China and relevant countries should pursue international cooperation and achieve common prosperity based on complementing each other's advantages and achieving mutual benefit. Subject Characteristics of Chinese foreign investment in agriculture Task It should actively use international rules to make policy suggestions on outbound agricultural investment so as to better promote the global distribution of Chinese agricultural resources and markets. Methods The Belt and Road initiative is committed to building an open, equal and inclusive regional cooperation platform. China and relevant countries should pursue international cooperation and achieve common prosperity based on complementing each other's advantages and achieving mutual benefit. In this context, actively promoting China's agricultural investment in countries and regions along the Belt and Road is not only beneficial, but also makes full use of two international and domestic resources, two cities, firms and two roles to achieve high-quality agricultural development. It will also promote the rapid and sustained growth of host agriculture, and then build a new global agricultural cooperation system.	Brief description of the thesis 1. The Basic Theory of China's foreign Investment in Agriculture Sector 2. The Practical Development of Chinese foreign Investment in Agriculture Sector 3. Recommendations for development of Chinese foreign investments in agriculture sectors	Chapter 1 The paper is a brief theoretical analysis of Chinese agricultural investment, and deeply study the current situation and development trend of Chinese agricultural investment and its requirements of agricultural investment legislation, study the current agricultural investment system, explore the need of agricultural investment legislation, the analysis of the necessity of agricultural investment legislation.
Chapter 2 China's agricultural investment case in Myanmar From the perspective of investment field, China's investment in Myanmar is mainly concentrated on planting industry, especially grain planting (Figure 1), which is mainly concentrated in planting, production and processing trade in the industrial chain.  China's direct investment in Myanmar was US $1.65 billion, agriculture, forestry, animal husbandry and fishery accounted for 6.76%. Investment stock was US $10.64 billion, agriculture, forestry and fishery investment stock accounted for 19.5%, which is the low industry after mining industry. In terms of investment scale, the stock of China's agricultural investment flow in Myanmar has basically increased (Figure 2). 	Chapter 3 Improve the efficiency and suggestions of Chinese foreign investment in agriculture Policy recommendations :Foreign investment in the agricultural field refers to the government and agricultural enterprises, in order to obtain higher economic benefits, integrate resources in various fields, and carry out agricultural investment and operational production activities across national boundaries Questions requiring further research Increase the support of financial and insurance, increase the degree of subsidies for China's agricultural enterprises in terms of overseas financing and investment risks, improve the loans of China's agricultural enterprises, and provide mortgage facilitation conditions	Conclusion In the current stage, China's agricultural foreign investment policy Suggestions: Its the national overall investment strategy, the cultivated land resources rich political stable and friendly national list, sign up bilateral agricultural investment agreement, for land development, import and export of agricultural production resources, food safety, tax, signed a bilateral agreement to protect our environment interests, based on the principle of mutual benefit and win-win, from income, labor, culture and environmental protection to protect each other's fundamental interests. A thorough analysis of hot areas and controversial issues such as China's outbound investment situation in China's agricultural outbound investment, China's role in global international agricultural outbound investment, the location selection of China's international agricultural outbound investment, and the path of improving China's international agricultural discourse power. To some extent, we can avoid the research dilemma of different opinions but relatively poor persuasion in qualitative analysis. To improve the scientific understanding of the complex and multi-dimensional foreign investment problem in agriculture, We will support and improve the decisions on outbound investment in agriculture.
