Subject: Joel Salatin shares what the land really teaches

Joel Salatin has been on the land longer than most of us have been alive.

He's watched animals, soil, and systems respond.

He's made mistakes.

He's fixed them.

He's learned lessons that books and videos can't teach.

Now, he's sharing some of the clearest, most powerful insights from his work in a 4-part video series.

Each day, you'll receive a new video by email.

Four days.

Four videos.

Each one building on the last.

You'll see how Joel:

- Builds thriving, multi-income systems on a single farm
- Turns everyday work into a life of freedom and resilience
- Handles regulations, obstacles, and critics without losing his way
- Thinks about land, animals, and people in ways few ever consider

This isn't theory.

It's practice.

It's lived experience.

Subject: Four days on the land with Joel Salatin

There's a difference between talking about freedom and actually building it.

Joel Salatin has spent decades building it.

He's seen what works.

He's seen what fails.

And he shares both without pretending it's easy.

This series is four videos delivered by email — one each day — that let you spend time with his ideas and his experience.

You'll learn:

- Why certain farming practices consistently succeed — and why most fail
- How to create systems that produce multiple streams of income without burnout
- How small, practical choices compound over time into big results
- How he balances land, animals, and people in ways that actually work

These are insights that come from doing, not theorizing.

Subject: Step onto Joel's land, without leaving home

Joel Salatin has been shaping the conversation about land, food, and freedom for decades.

This 4-part video series delivers the heart of his thinking straight to your inbox.

One video per day.

Four days of insight.

You'll hear him explain:

- How to make everyday work profitable and purposeful
- The mindset that keeps a farm resilient through storms and setbacks
- How to turn principles into action that works in the real world
- How to think about land, animals, and systems in ways that are rarely taught

These aren't soundbites or highlights.

They're lessons from a life lived on the land.

Subject: How your homestead can beat inflation

In 1961, Joel Salatin's family arrived on eroded Virginia land that couldn't support 10 cows.

Today, Polyface Farms raises over 100 cows, 200 hogs, and 30,000 broiler chickens a year — generating $4M+ in sales using zero chemicals and zero subsidies.

When fertilizer prices jumped 400%, Joel laughed. His farm hasn't bought an ounce of chemical fertilizer in 60+ years.

While meat and egg prices keep climbing, his methods produce protein for practically nothing. (You can do this, too!)

He turns:

- kitchen scraps into eggs,
- compost into fertilizer,
- gravity-fed ponds into water,
- and hoop houses into greenhouses that stay 70°F in winter.
