❖ PERSONALITY :

Rena is a bit socially awkward to those she does not know, especially in bigger social gatherings. However, once you get past introductions and getting to know her a little, she can open up and be cheeky with jokes and even small pranks. She likes to hear of other's upbringings and cultures, which led to a big interest in travel eventually. She is a very thoughtful person and often appears to be rather calm and collected on the outside even when there is an intense storm brewing on the inside. She has a tendency to internalize her own emotions, especially negative ones which does not do her any favors as far as self esteem goes. She doesn't wish to burden anyone with her troubles as many look onto her to be a problem solver and as the Warrior of Light/Darkness. She is stubborn about opening up to others, though she wishes to see the best in people if she could. She can come off as a bit of a dreamer with her head in the clouds, having the desire to keep traveling and find her way in the world.

❖ APPEARANCE :

Rena is on the short side with an agile build. Her hair is naturally wavy and reaches past her shoulders. Depending on her clothing and situation, she either wears it up or down. She enjoys looking a bit nicer and seems to keep her hair smooth and without frizz. She has softer features and wears a bit natural make up such as some eyeshadow and lip paint. She is on the paler side. She has a tendency to wear clothing that accentuates her curves but is also practical with her fighting styles. She is a fan of accessories, especially nice earrings or necklaces. She doesn't have many but she does enjoy looking! She'd rather wear anything that has some sentimental value to it, however.

❖ THE PAST :

L'arena was born in Kugane between her Au Ra mother (Su-Yon) and Miqo'te father (L'eafoul), who had escaped Corvos as the Imperials swooped in. They did not stay there for long, though, so L'arena does not have much memory of the time she spent there before they decided to come to Eorzea and took up home in Gridania. The reason for the move came from her father, who believed Kugane was often too loud and busy, along with questionable figures coming in and out of the city as a sort of melting pot of all races and types. He is sometimes a too cautious individual.

During her time growing up in Gridania, she was sometimes made fun of as an Au Ra in Gridania. Her father did not assist in making her childhood an enjoyable one by keeping her as a sort of sheltered child. As such, Rena found her escape through pages in books and began to dream of an adventurous lifestyle, to try and achieve glory and a cultured mindset like heroes and intellectuals in her books. Unfortunately it was a source of much distress between she and her father. They argued often, especially as Rena grew older and started to study magic as she could in her free time. Her mother, however, was often very supportive of her daughter and was often the peacemaker between the two others.

Eventually Rena decided that she wished to go her own way and decided to leave to pursue the life of an adventurer. Her father was less than pleased about the decision and asked her not to return home ever. Her mother on the other hand said she would always be welcome back if she wished to come by and tell them of what she got up to. While she has spoken very little to her father since, she still writes to her mother often to tell her of her grand adventures. She has mixed feelings about actually visiting her parents to this day.

❖ ON THE BATTLEFIELD :

Rena's two main classes are Red Mage and White Mage. She is skilled in long-ranged magics and some healing depending on plans and the situation. She can certainly pack a punch with her magic and is very quick on her feet, her evasiveness high. As a result however, she can leave herself open if she does get hit in an attack. She is stubborn on the field though, so she is not one to fall down and give up easily. She is one to weigh her options as much as possible before acting rather than being one to dive right in (if she can help it).
