

Frontpage News: The Cold War

Task:

Research information about a Cold War event and how the event impacted relations between the US and USSR to create the front page of a Cold War newspaper.

Requirements:

Write a primary news article about an important Cold War event. The article should be approximately 300 words. It should also include at least one quotation (the quotation can be fictitious but must be historically accurate). The article must also mention how the event impacted relations with the United States and Soviet Union. The following should be incorporated into the layout for the newspaper:

- a headline for the newspaper
- a picture with a caption which relates to the article.
- an original and creative title for the newspaper.
- a date for the paper
- other creative elements which might be found on a front page (table of contents, quote of the day, etc.) These features should also relate to the Cold War.
- Other: The paper may be written from the perspective of the United States or the perspective of the Soviet Union.
