Good-natured

Loyal

Determined

Flirtatious

Optimistic

Impatient/Impulsive

Eager to impress

Naive

Playful

Pieper is an energetic Oricorio, full of liveliness. Enjoying the idea of being active constantly, she's quite playful in a sense with both children, but also with older folk, cracking jokes and dragging others along to dance with her (and possibly run into some trouble). She also tends to be a bit flirty, offering winks and nicknames anyone's way just for the lighthearted fun in it (and to her advantage to protect others if need be). Because of her active nature, she also tends to be quite impatient and act before she's properly assessed the situation. However, she tends not to see this as much of a problem. This is due to her more than positive outlook on life overall.

Pieper is very optimistic about life and how things will end up. If you try hard enough, things will be good, right? She is a firm believer that being positive is more powerful than anything else, and is one of her strongest motivators. This causes her to come off as naive, and she quite literally is. Yet, there is a side to her that recognizes when things are bad, and uses her positive attitude to persevere. Because of this, and her desire to impress (and often surprise) others, Pieper has adapted to becoming determined and sticking to what she has to do for the sake of others.

In all Pieper does, her heart and mind set to do what is good and helpful to all. Growing up where everyone was so tightly connected, Pieper finds high value in the ones she trusts and only wants to make them proud and happy. Loyal to the bone, it's hard to shake her off once she's attached, and she becomes protective, like her guard position back home has taught her.

Overall, Pieper is a happy-go-lucky bird with a few tricks up her sleeve, despite her pink and cutesy appearance.

History

“The elder asked us to do this. We have to.”

Pieper grew up on the small, mountainous island northwest of Emerald's mainland known as Avesvicus. Beyond the ferals inhabiting the island, this was home to a village of bird pokemon, Pieper being one of those birds, living with her parents, both Oricorio as well. Life on this island was full of energy. Music, dancing, festivals each season and through the year kept the place upbeat and happy. The elder, watching over everyone with a smile and enjoying the fun.

As Pieper grew up, she attended the schooling the village provided for the children, her mother being one of the teachers. She did fairly well, having 24/7 help whenever she desired it. But as she reached her later years, starting at around 15, she began to wonder what part she wanted to play in this community. She couldn't be a teacher like her mom; no, that was too hard. She couldn't cook, or at least very well, so there was no use in helping out in that sense. She didn't like the idea of hunting the ferals, although the concept of protecting the village in another way sparked her interest. It was then she decided she'd pursue becoming one of the guards.

Eager to begin immediately, Pieper went to the elder of the village to seek information on how to do such. On her way she ran into not the elder, but rather a real guard, a shiny Toucannon by the name of Emmanuelle. Practically begging on the spot, Pieper pleaded to be taught the ways of guard duty. She emphasized her work ethic, her determination to do it, all with a giant smile on her face. The idea brought her so much joy. Despite the rather childish display, Emmanuelle agreed, that is, once the bird was 16.

Until her birthday arrived, Pieper spent time with her soon-to-be mentor quite a lot. Asking more than enough questions about the task at hand, helping out with small things that she was allowed to, and just generally bonding with this bird. She became a second mother, her wife a third. Her birthday came before she knew it, and the real training finally began. For the next two years, Pieper worked, quite literally, under Emmanuelle's wing to become a guard and help protect the whole village.

Her skills would be soon tested, when the disaster came. For an island as small as Avesvicus was, calling what happened a disaster was an understatement. Through the chaos and the destruction, Pieper spotted a Togetic in need of help. She was a guard, she had to do something. Leaping to action, she saved this villager from peril, simply stating it as her duty and leaving them with a wink. Little did she know this Togetic, Destiny, would bring her so much in return.

Once the dust had settled and things calmed, it was clear to see work would have to be done to make things anything remotely like they used to be. However, things did not seem completely dark, as she had heard her name over the radio. A vaguely familiar voice, thanking her for what she had done yesterday, saving their life. Destiny, was it? This sparked a bond, Pieper eager to thank this Togetic for the recognition. The two grew closer and closer as they helped bring back the heart to the village along with Emmanuelle and other villagers, eventually becoming a couple.

After this year had passed, Avesvicus was in better shape, but still not what it used to be. This was when the elder had asked Emmanuelle and Pieper to come meet with him. Addressing the loss of Emmanuelle's wife during the Disaster and birth of their child Montague around the same time, the elder suggested she leave the island and go somewhere safer, in better shape. Pieper being her pupil, was there to be alerted of no longer being a pupil, in that case. He found it unsafe for such a young child to continue being raised on the island, seeing as how things were still shaky in comparison to before the Disaster occurred.

However, both argued against the idea. Avesvicus was their home, everyone here family, including the elder himself. But, in the end, he was right. As the elder wished, Emmanuelle would go. But where? It was then Pieper remembered that with Destiny being a radio reporter, she had traveled to a variety of places, and had gotten word about a guild in Everstone. It would kinda be like the guard work, right? It'd be helping out the world, and make it safer for everyone back home, especially young Montague. So, with that in mind, Pieper decided instead of staying in the village, she'd follow her mentor/friend to Everstone. She didn't want to stay in the village if the people she cared about were leaving, and thus had to decide whether staying to help the village, or helping her second family was of more value to her. In the end, she felt as a guard, maybe joining the guild was like being a guard to the world, not just home. And so, that was her decision, even if she was the only one to do it. She knew Emmanuelle and Destiny may want to try and find more stability in a new place before doing anything like the guild, but Pieper wanted to jump right into it.

• Home Island: Emerald • Home Town: Avesvicus

“ A village inhabiting specifically bird Pokemon, Avesvicus is rich in its culture and lifestyle. Lively throughout the year, music and festivals of all sorts are at the center of tradition. The festivals throughout the year are based on the weather and time, and represented by different legendary bird Pokemon. Villagers tend to have a certain “thing” they collect that fits their personality, and participate in the festivals in some way or another. With an elder to guide them all away from chaos, Avesvicus is generally upbeat and joyful.”

Extras and Trivia

“Wanna dance, cutie?”

Emmanuele's wife Amara taught Pieper harp.

When excited, Pieper's S's gain a whistle-lisp (think Gopher from Winnie the Pooh)

Pieper collects music boxes; her room is filled with them.
