

Conversation – Describing Yourself and Others

When getting to know someone, it's useful to be able to describing yourself and the people you meet. The question to answer is this:

- ¿Cómo eres tú? - _____
 - Yo soy inteligente y alto. - _____

When asked another person, the question to answer is this:

- ¿Cómo es Ricardo? - _____
 - Ricardo es bajo y simpático. - _____

When asked about others collectively, the question is this:

- ¿Cómo son Victoria y Laura? - _____
 - Victoria y Laura son flacas y rápidas. - _____

Remember that each noun in Spanish, let alone people, is assigned a gender and a number. When describing people, the adjectives must match their gender (masculine or feminine) and their number (either singular or plural).

- Miguel es alto.
- Laura es alta.
- Miguel y Laura son altos.
- Laura y Veronica son alta.

If the subject is plural, but comprised of mixed genders, the adjective would be written in its masculine form.

Some adjectives don't have a feminine form.

- Miguel es fuerte.
- Laura es fuerte.
- Miguel es inteligente.
- Laura es inteligente.

These adjectives still have a plural form.

- Los chico son inteligentes
- Las chicas son fuertes.
