Abstract (12-point Times New Roman, bolded, justified): The body of your abstract begins here. It should be an explicit summary of your presentation that states the problem, the methods used, and the major results and conclusions. The abstract does not include scientific symbols, acronyms, numbers, bullets, or lists. The abstract should be written between 150 – 250 words with 10-point Times New Roman, justified and single line spacing. The first part of your abstract should state the problem you set out to solve or the issue you set out to explore and explain your rationale for pursuing the project. The problem or issue might be a research question, a gap in critical attention to a text, a societal concern, etc. The purpose of your study is to solve this problem and/or add to your discipline's understanding of the issue. This section of the abstract should explain how you solved the problem or explored the issue you identified. Your abstract should also describe the research methods; this section should include a concise description of the process by which you conducted your research. Next, your abstract should list the results or outcomes of the work you have done so far. If your project is incomplete, you may still include preliminary results or your hypotheses about what those results will be. Finally, your abstract should close with a statement of the project's implications and contributions to its field. It should convince readers that the project is interesting, valuable, and worth investigating further. In particular, it should convince conference registrants to attend your presentation. It is recommended that you download these directions as an MS Word document and use it as the template for your abstract as it contains all necessary formats and styles.

Keywords: Keywords need to be descriptive and capture the most important aspects of your paper. They are used for indexing databases and as search terms for readers. Include three (3) to five (5) words, phrases, or acronyms as keywords. Times New Roman; Font 10*
