

An alien species that is highly advanced is in danger of being destroyed by another alien. These aliens leave their planet in search of a sentient species in order to construct a highly advanced vessel that they can use to fight back. Their journey leads them to Earth in which they search the inhabitants for a being that is mentally sound. After scanning a wide variety of humans they settle upon one. By this time their ship has broken down. They must do what they have to in order to survive. They locate this human camping with a group of scientists on a remote part of the world. With their last reserves they land in a hiding spot nearby the camp grounds of their target. Meanwhile this human feels something calling. He gets out of his sleeping bag to search for whatever is drawing him. As he searches he trips over something and hits his head on something and goes unconscious. When he wakes up he finds that his thoughts are a little scrambled and he feels all confused. He also has a bit of a headache which slowly fades. He sees that the sky is starting to get a bit light and he realizes that he should return to his campsite before his team decides to search for him. As he decides to set out he hears a voice in his head. He finds out that an alien has burrowed into his brain and has merged with him. He becomes concerned with hearing a voice in his head and he asks the alien, Queen she calls herself, to prove that she's real and not something that is wrong with him. To appease him she has one of her workers bite his hand and tells him to show it to one of his comrades. When he returns he finds his team getting ready to send a search party for him. He tells them not to worry that he left to go to the bathroom and tripped on a rock and was knocked unconscious. He further tells them that he had just awoken and realized what happened and then decided to return after doing his business. He shows them the bite telling them that he thinks that he got bit by an insect of some kind. After the medic examines it, and the bump on his head he got from falling, the medic tells him that he's fine. Although, the bump will be sore and the bite might be itchy for a bit. After all this they start to pack up because this is the end of their expedition. Queen tells him that they have to stay for a week in order to do some additional things. He then goes on to tell his team that he thought he saw something that he wanted to explore further. He tells them that he'll be fine but he'll stay for perhaps a week before returning. The team captain, knowing of his survival skills doesn't feel too concerned but asks for him to keep a radio and a GPS unit with him so that he can return and ask for help when he needs to. After everyone packs up they separate and leave him by himself. He returns to the location that the Queen tells him too and finds their space ship which looks somewhat damaged and sees that it's almost the same size as himself. Queen tells him that they should hide in a cave until they get fully situated. He gives them a few of his batteries so they can power their ship enough to move it into the cave. That and the energy they collected using solar power is enough. They then put him into a kind of state of stasis for a week. During that time they add holograph and force-field technology to his body and they disassemble their ship to store it in his body. And they end up running out of time and have to return. He returns home and during that time the aliens work to integrate their technology into his body to prepare for their return trip to rescue their home world. These aliens resemble ants but are highly advanced. Their reason for finding a sentient being is because when the Queen merges with the creature, they lose their intelligence based on the level of the host. So they searched for one with a high enough intelligence that they could start with. From there they would be able to incorporate their technology to improve every aspect including the intelligence. In order to make the proper vessel they had to start with such a creature which also had the quality of adventure, integrity and intellect with which they could improve upon. The adventure aspect being necessary for their return trip to save their home-world.

rebuild certain parts of his body using their technology and they incorporate their ship into his body. After doing some of the basic changes that they need to he returns home. Some of the initial changes that they make at that point are first they miniaturize his structure a bit to give them room. They project a force-field/hologram around his body to make it look the same and to provide for the possibility of disguising himself. They modify his skin so that it becomes hardened armor. The material is not really a metal but a hyper-advance meta-skin. It's a material that is stronger than the strongest metal. Plus it's able to self-heal. The slight miniaturization, storing their original ship, adding the hologram/force-field and remaking the skin into armor are all the changes that they have time for.

 - Why
 - A technology developed for predicting future events through peering into the fabric of the universe predicts a possible chance of this race being annihilated. As a way of dealing with it they seek out the closest source of this prediction. This source is the aliens that end up escaping to Earth.
 - Protagonist - Human
 - Traits
 - Human
 - Intelligent
 - Man of Integrity
 - Part in Story
 - As a scientist he was searching for something. He didn't know if it was an object or a concept or something. He felt like something was missing in his life. Perhaps a purpose.

- The aliens merge with this person.
- Supporting Character - Alien Race
 - Traits
 - Extraterrestrial
 - Race is only able to survive in an environment with a high bio-content. For this reason, they have to merge with another creature in order to obtain their adaptability. Through this merging process there is a certain crossover of traits and abilities. Because of this, when they merge, they have to select a target with a sufficient level of intelligence, otherwise they would end up losing themselves with no way to rebuild up to their old level of intelligence.
 - I'll project into this race, the view that people may view aliens as. Beings of a higher existence who have evolved past basic conflicts. At the same time however, they'll be alien in the hive-mind sense. This race are small in body but big in mind.
 - Basically this race is almost completely opposite of the Antagonistic alien race.
 - The only reason this race is able to understand the main character is because of the merging process.
