Private Information

Your Worst Misdeeds	Your Worst Fears
1: The 'Want It, Need It' incident. 2: Tried to learn forbidden magic to stop time and prevent an apocalypse that wasn't actually going to happen. 3: Ignored her Canterlot friends after she moved out of the capital. Most of them didn't take it too personally. Most of them... One of them became an asocial hermit 4: Poor communication with Pinkie Pie has led to multiple instances of friction between the friends, up to and including a massive insecurity crash where Pinkie spiraled for hours. Everyone made up in the end, but she still feels bad about it.	1: Losing her friends and/or family. It's something she's been forced to confront many, many times now but it never gets any easier. 2: Ladybugs. She got swarmed by them as a small filly and an irrational fear was born. 3: 4:
Your Worst Secrets	Your Chosen Personal Belongings
1: Has practiced necromancy. Just one time! But still... 2: A hundred and one white lies to Princess Celestia over 15 years of studying. None of which Celestia would care about, but they still mortify Twilight regardless. 3: ... (Undecided, but quota of at least 6 misdeeds and secrets has been reached so it's okay)	1: Participant chose to haggle with the representative for exactly how many books from her residence she could bring onto the island. She was permitted to bring a collection of 12 novels. 2: 3:

1 Person You Treasure Most

While she does owe Princess Celestia a lot, and she loves her friends and biological close family dearly, she personally raised Spike starting from when she herself was barely older than a toddler. She feels a deep responsibility for his care and happiness, and in her own moderately out of touch way tries to show her gratitude for all the help she's received from him over the years. The relationship they have is a slightly convoluted mishmash of older sister-younger brother, parent-child, and superior-subordinate, and in all contexts she both relies on him for support and sees it as her duty to model for him the skills and proper conduct any foal (or baby dragon) would need to grow into a healthy adult. She could not be who she is today without Spike, and vice versa.

Public Information

(Public information is any quality that is immediately apparent when your character is interacting socially, competing in challenges, or participating in bonus games! You can add as many as you like if the tab contains a numbered list, but your Useful and Hindering Qualities must be equal or you will be asked to revise them! Personality traits do not need to be even.)

Personality (Best Traits) (Qualities that would be beneficial socially such as kindness, helpfulness, and a sense of fairness.)	Personality (Worst Traits) (Qualities that hinder your character socially such as bluntness, selfishness, or a bad temper)
1: Tries to err towards compassion whenever (reasonably) possible. 2: 3: ...	1: While well-intentioned when she reaches out to lend some help, she can come across as pushy or patronizing. 2: 3: ...
3 Positive/Useful Qualities:	3 Negative/Hindering Qualities:
1: Very particular about how her space is arranged. When given room to do so, she will extend this behavior further and further. Often not very time efficient in cases such as quadruple checking her work, but can work wonders optimizing substandard workflow. 2: Freakishly well-read. 3: ...	1: Being a perfectionist with a scrupulous track record and high expectations for herself, she spirals bad after even small failures. This typically leads to her mistakes snowballing as she panics to course-correct them, or her throwing all rationality out of the window in a crisis. 2: Quite bad at picking up sarcastic or joking responses and will respond to them factually. Even if she does pick up on it she might ignore that it was a joke and choose to infodump the facts of the subject anyway. God help you if the topic was something she knows offhandedly because you will be corrected with a short essay on the subject so fast and she will do so while thinking she's being helpful. 3: ...
