Early life.

Circe, or Celia as she was named at birth, was born the younger sibling to a wealthy family. She had a older sister, Elizabeth(. She never got along with her sister. Elizabeth believed in ghosts, magic, but Circe focused on more realistic interests, science, virology, genetics. She wanted knowledge. She began displaying violent tendencies too, killing the family cat for “study”.

Teenage years

She excelled in school but wouldn't focus much on her family or social life. She would continue her hobby of dissections, raccoons, dogs, frogs, any animals she could easily gain access to, and began replacing their insides with metal organs she crafted. Her parents worried but she always ignored them, and her sister. They meant nothing to her. She'd graduate with perfect scores. 100% on every assignment throughout her entire time in school. Her parents would give her a departing gift, a piece of their fortune as an attempt of a nice farewell. She accepted it and left.

Early adult life.

Circe would move into her first apartment and begin her plans immediately. She would “borrow” some technology from those who didnt need it. And in collaboration with Gears would create a genetic recoder to alter her DNA to perfection and insert knowledge into her head to instantly learn any subjects that interested her. But the machine was flawed and would short circuit. It caused irreversible brain damage to Circe, twisting her thoughts and desires, stripping her emotions. She was found by Gears and was nursed back to health, and agreed to join with them. Additionally, her spine was replaced by a better robotic one. She now sits in the background and helps them develop tech, assassinate targets, and whatever else they need of her. Hearing their mission, she agreed to it. Metal was the future, and she'd be with them to secure it.
