In order to download multiple files efficiently and not one at a time, you will need a batch file downloader. While there are paid options out there like the Internet Download Manager, I personally use the free and open source JDownloader2. You are welcome to use what software you like, but this guide will be focused around JDownloader2.

(FREE) Required Software

To download JDownloader2 for your system, navigate to their homepage and pick your operating system. Go ahead and install it, once it's open click File > Analyse Text with Links.

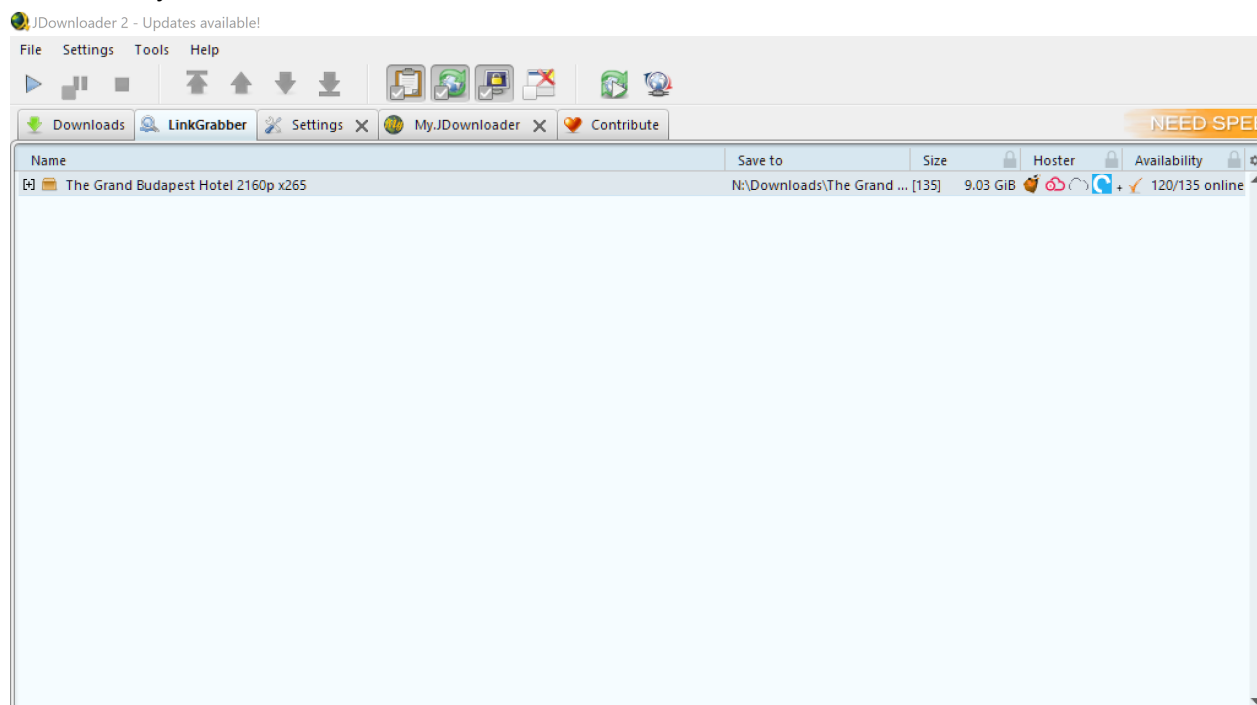

You'll be greeted with the box below. The giant box at the top is where you need to copy and paste the links that need to be downloaded. Next, you will need to choose the download directory. Lastly, make sure Auto Extract is unchecked. We'll be using 7Zip to extract the files.

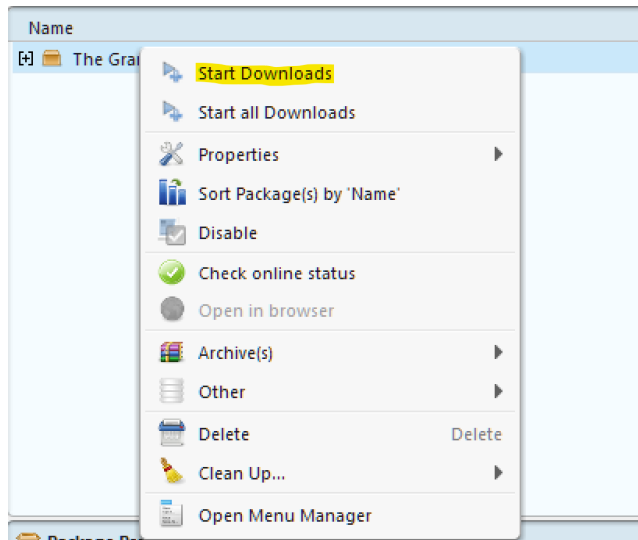

Click Continue to start analyzing the links.

Downloading

To start your download, navigate to the "LinkGrabber" Tab as shown below. You should see the file you wish to download.

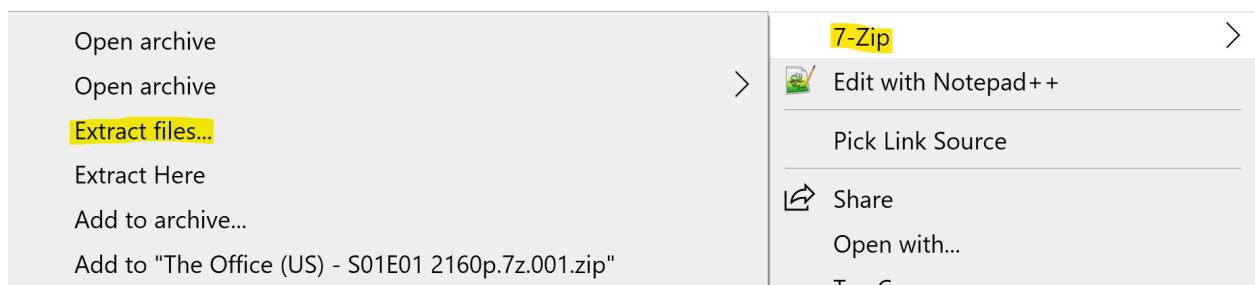

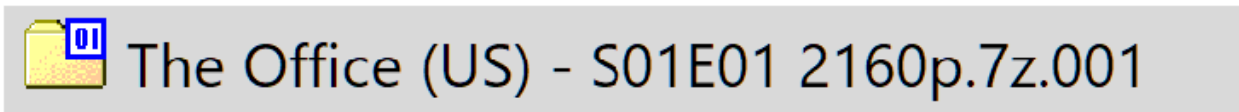

Once all the links have been scanned, and the number of available files stops increasing, right click on the name of your file and “Start Downloads”.

Extracting

Once all the parts have been downloaded, make sure you have 7Zip (Another free and open source program). Once 7Zip is installed, you should be able to right click on the first file in the sequence, and Extract the files.

The password, if there is one, will always be “fitguy” with no spaces or capitalization.
