

SUN | HOME | FORM | FLOW

Everything is based around your life path. All this of cultural significance is completely optional anyway, but if you're reading this you've decided to enmesh yourself in this culture, so I'll just continue on; you can sort yourself into one type of life path, SUN, HOME, FORM, or FLOW, by your own will (because a life path is about what you do, and what you do should be what you want to be doing), and then you can sort yourself according to how you are, or you'd like to be, at your core. (I.e. I'd pick Flow, because I'm a very go-with-the-flow kinda guy, and I do want to continue trying it all, indefinitely; fixing and building cars and bikes, building sculptures and structures, cooking and baking, sharing stories, making maps, taking photos, I want to try all that life has to offer, and then I'd pick Home, because not only do I enjoy making it so others feel welcome & safe around me, I personally feel safest having a permanent base or station I can return to, on my journey to try everything.) The two then mesh into one to create, not a permanent personal or family name, but rather a ephemeral, shifting title that you or your family could use (i.e. Flowhome). I'd like to think it makes sense. And it keeps things both organized and open. My vision is that you can give yourself a title to use as a last name, and then your partner or child could use that title as a last name, coupled with a personal first name, until they discover one of their own. When they do, they could sort themselves as well. And there, now we know the vague career trajectory and personality of both you and your family.

SUN

Path: You have a spark in you. You could either be a machinist or an artist, but either way, you're not bound by one field. You are not alone, but you don't need anyone else to do what you do. You are not one thing, you do not make only one thing. You create. It does not always have to be a practical or even purposeful creation. As long as you create.

Core: Choosing this means you're a bright, warm presence with passionate, even frenetic, energy. You feel safe and capable anywhere the sun shines. Others feel inspired and driven around you.

HOME

Path: You provide connection, sustenance; food, water, and healing. Or knowledge, particularly archival knowledge. You are a homemaker, but in only the simplest, truest sense of the word; you make home. You are not forced to have a partner, children, or the sweetest temperament possible. And you are not in anyone's shadow. You are known, you are thanked, you are the foundations of community & culture. Your work is not only counted as work but as the most important work.

Core: Choosing this means you're a stable presence with loving, receptive, but not passive, energy. You feel safest and most capable at a permanent base or station where you can stay for long periods of time and gather a good character for a space in the form of furniture or trinkets.

Others feel welcome and safe in your presence, like they can return you to you after a long journey or simply a long day.

FORM

Path: You are a different type of maker, because you pick a project pattern and stick with it. You aren't forced to stay with that project pattern forever, but your existence is calmer, and changes happen slowly. You could work in architecture, construction, infrastructure maintenance, design, etc., but all your project patterns have something to do with bringing a physical form to an idea; bringing that physical form into the world. For the good of the community & culture, you make monuments, you are a monument.

Core:

FLOW

Path:

Core: