Live URL:
https://www.profit.co/blog/employee-engagement/10-creative-employee-engagement-ideas-that-work-in-2021/

Staging URL:
https://www.profitokr.net/blog/10-employee-engagement-idea-that-work/

10 EMPLOYEE ENGAGEMENT IDEAS THAT WORK

Banner   -
https://www.shutterstock.com/image-vector/job-satisfacion-word-concepts-banner-your-1285020946

What is Employee Engagement?

Employee engagement is an important workplace principle that, when encouraged correctly, prompts employees to put in their best efforts in their jobs. When companies find creative ways to engage employees, they are passionate and committed towards the organization that they work for and give it their all to their jobs.

Employee engagement happens when both the employee and the organization lay their trust and commitment into each other, thus making the employee feel acknowledged, appreciated and seen. This increases performance and productivity, and as a result, benefits the organization.

Employee engagement matters a lot, for work is a huge part of our lives, and everyone seeks happiness at work.

"A leader is someone who creates infectious enthusiasm." -- Ted Turner, American entrepreneur

Why is Employee Engagement important?

Which organization wouldn't want their employees to be happy at work? They want them to look forward to coming to work everyday, and love their jobs. But this 'want' doesn't come easy. It takes work.

With so many job opportunities out there, employees are no longer tied down to one job for the rest of their career. If they are not appreciated and acknowledged, it's a no-brainer that they will definitely go seeking a place that will recognize their efforts. Therefore, it's very important to cultivate a workplace, and a workplace relationship that can retain the best performers.

That's where Employee Engagement comes into the picture. Employee Engagement has a direct impact on the organization's success. And therefore, the need to take care of the employees as they are the reason behind an organization's success (or downfall!)

Here are a few employee engagement ideas that work and can help an organization succeed:

10 Employee Engagement Ideas That Work

Employee Engagement | Profit.co

1

Foster company culture through the workplace

Match the physical space of the workplace with the kind of culture you would like to foster.

2

Build engagement through relationships

Positive employee-manager relationships can keep employees engaged and motivated in their role.

3

Give employees opportunities to collaborate

Encourage teamwork and peer support through activities outside of work that build camaraderie.

4

Podcasts

Communicate to employees via podcasts with updates about the workplace, employee spotlight stories, and other important information.

5

Health & Wellness

Implement a wellness program to let employees know you care about their wellbeing and give them tools they need to take care of themselves.

6

Team Lunches

Having lunch as a department or team can foster better teamwork, and scheduling a speaker and providing lunch is a great way to develop skills.

7

Give employees flexibility with their work schedules

Give employees the opportunity to be flexible with their work schedules- like arriving earlier or later.

8

Awards and Recognition

Too much work can lead to burnout. Make sure you recognize employees and congratulate them for jobs well done.

9

Get Employee Feedback

Cultivate a culture of open communication so that employees feel comfortable giving their feedback and know that action will be taken.

10

Make it a fun workplace

Foster a fun environment at work to motivate employees and break up difficult tasks. Small breaks can boost morale and productivity.

PROFIT.CO

10 Employee engagement ideas

1. Foster company culture through the workplace: Match the physical space of the workplace with the kind of culture you would like to foster.
2. Build engagement through relationships: Positive employee-manager relationships can keep employees engaged and motivated in their role.
3. Give employees opportunities to collaborate: Encourage teamwork and peer support through activities outside of work that build camaraderie.
4. Podcasts: Communicate to employees via podcasts with updates about the workplace, employee spotlight stories, and other important information.
5. Health & Wellness: Implement a wellness program to let employees know you care about their wellbeing and give them tools they need to take care of themselves.
6. Team Lunches: Having lunch as a department or team can foster better teamwork, and scheduling a speaker and providing lunch is a great way to develop skills.
7. Give employees flexibility with their work schedules: Give employees the opportunity to be flexible with their work schedules- like arriving earlier or later.
8. Awards and Recognition: Too much work can lead to burnout. Make sure you recognize employees and congratulate them for jobs well done.
9. Get Employee Feedback: Cultivate a culture of open communication so that employees feel comfortable giving their feedback and know that action will be taken.
10. Make it a fun workplace: Foster a fun environment at work to motivate employees and break up difficult tasks. Small breaks can boost morale and productivity.

1. Foster company culture through the workplace

The environment where people are, the physical space that they occupy, can have a huge impact on their state of mind. This space can be used to inculcate the culture, the values and the beliefs of the organization. It can be in the form of decor, the colors and lighting, the kind of furniture and machines used, the floorplan.

Everything that's used to create an office plan has the potential to communicate the company culture to its employees.

2. Building engagement through relationships

Employees leave bad bosses, not bad jobs.
This goes on to explain how much of an impact relationships can have on engagement.
A bad boss or bad leadership results in a high turnover rate, and employees find it hard to find motivation to be at the workplace for the long run.
It is, however, possible to create an environment where employees can form relationships. Find creative ways to foster engagement, for example:

- A Hobbies and Interests Club

In an organization, there would be employees across departments who share similar interests. Creating Interests and Hobbies Clubs gives them the opportunity to explore those interests together, that helps build friendships and strong bonds that will help the employees and the organization alike, in the long run. It could be in the form of a Chess Club, Sports Club, Book Club -- it can be anything that aligns with the interests of the employees and values of the organization.

- Scavenger Hunt

A Scavenger Hunt is an employee engagement idea that can help newly hired employees get familiar with the office and act as an ice breaker to initiate a conversation with the other employees and get to know and forge relationships and connections.

3. Give employees opportunities to collaborate

Speaking of fun clubs and Scavenger Hunts, team events are a great way to liven up the workplace. Create plenty of opportunities for the employees to get to know each other and work together. Team events can provide opportunities for different departments to interact and collaborate with each to achieve a common goal can help inspire productivity.

Some fun employee engagement ideas include:

- Escape rooms
- Murder mysteries
- Quizzes
- White river rafting
- Bowling
- Karaoke

These activities build a sense of camaraderie and make it possible for employees from different departments, or different cities, to interact with each other that wouldn't have happened otherwise. Employees who bond well with their co-workers are more engaged with their workplace. It helps them come out of their silos and see how their work can impact each other that together can be beneficial to the organization. It also helps break the monotony of a regular workday.

Workshops are yet another way of employees collaborating with each other.

An interactive workshop helps forge relationships between the members. Here are a few things that employees can gain from a workshop:

- Share industry insights with each other and learn more
- Learn from each other's experiences -- what works at the workplace and what doesn't.
- Brainstorm ideas and strategies that can be executed on various projects

When team events are introduced in every department, the company's employee experiences are sure to bring about a positive change. Workshops are a great avenue, especially to the newly appointed employees, to show how they can contribute and 'showcase' their skills.

4. Podcasts

Podcasts being so accessible are a great medium for internal communications. They work very well for the following:

- Reaching remote workers
- Communicating company culture
- Narrating employee stories

Do bear in mind that creating podcasts require some work beforehand: pre-production, production, post-production and execution of material. Make sure that it's not a repetition of the information that has already been conveyed through other channels (like newsletters or through emails). It just will end up being a waste of time and money for everyone involved.
Have a clear calendar in place for all the processes involved and the release of content.

5. Health and Wellness

When an employee is cared for, there is so much gratitude and commitment that the organization gets in return. A program centered around health and wellness can prove great for boosting productivity and morale. A free internal gym for the employees to use or a discounted gym membership elsewhere, or yoga are some good ideas.

If there's a cafeteria, take into consideration dietary restrictions when deciding on the cafeteria menu and make sure quality ingredients are used.

6. Team Lunches

Food has always been a good place to bond. Team lunches can be a great platform for people of the same department, or different departments to interact.

There's also the concept of lunch and learn, where the organization invites a speaker to talk about a certain topic, or get employees to talk about a topic, while sharing a meal and discussing the learnings afterwards. It's a great way to build relationships, and a good way to improve employee engagement.

7. Give employees flexibility with their work schedules

Give employees the flexibility to work that works for them best. Whether it is coming in to work a little earlier to leave earlier, or letting them come in later if they worked late the previous day, or giving them the option of working from home. Make remote working an option. There have been enough technological advancements that can make working remotely a breeze.

The option to work remotely makes it less stressful for employees and they can also save on time they spend commuting. The past year during the pandemic, is evidence that working remotely is surely possible.

Employees don't need to be at the workplace always -- that doesn't necessarily guarantee high productivity. Giving employees the freedom of flexibility at the workplace makes them happier, more productive and engaged for they get to decide their work schedules or location that suit their needs better.
When employees are given the freedom to choose what works for them best, as long as deadlines are met and quality of work doesn't suffer, it goes a long way in keeping them engaged and winning their trust.

The management and employee can together decide what works well and what needs to change.

8. Awards and Recognition

Be sure to appreciate employees for all the hard work they do. No matter how small or big, every contribution matters. Irrespective of how diligent or committed they are, too much work can lead to burn out. Refill their energy levels with recognition and appreciation and celebrate their hard work. And make sure to do this publicly.

A great way to do this is in the form of awards. Organize a night out for an awards ceremony for all employees to get together and recognize the winners. It can be a fun award ceremony with awards for 'The Most Punctual Employee of the month', or 'The Most Creative Employee of the month' or 'The Best Department'. Make it a fun night with dinner, music and entertainment. These can also feature on the company newsletter or the noticeboards.

Digital platforms and softwares can help with the distribution of awards. Softwares such as Profit.co's employee engagement module allows users to award one another with specific points or accolades, and keeps a line of communication and appreciation open within any organization. To find out more, you can book a free demo with our team!

9. Get Employee Feedback

Seek feedback from employees, for an organization needs constructive feedback on what is working well and what isn't. The management might think something is working well. But the employees might not agree with it. Therefore, it's very important to regularly seek feedback. And for that to happen, the organization needs to cultivate a culture of open communication so that employees always feel comfortable giving their honest feedback and know that action will be taken.

An organization that fosters an environment where employees are welcome to share their ideas and opinions, is an organization that's on its path to success; because employees who are encouraged to express their ideas are employees who are more productive. They feel heard and acknowledged and therefore are motivated to work. Getting employee feedback through an employee engagement activity like surveys is also a way of showing that the organization takes them seriously and values their opinions. Pulse surveys are a great way to assess what's the best way to drive employee engagement.

Therefore, they work harder for the organization to succeed and meet its objectives, thus making them more engaged with the organization. Overall, a win-win situation for all.

10. Make it a fun workplace

With so much time spent at work, it's very important that the place of work is a place that employees want to go. Foster a fun environment at work so that employees feel motivated to go to work everyday. Fun activities help increase engagement and productivity levels and also helps break the monotony of work.

There are a lot of ways to add some fun to the workplace. Some examples are:

- A short informational documentary movie session
- A movie night once a month every Friday evening
- Game night every now and then
- A potluck or catered lunch once a month

- A Halloween party for Halloween's Day

In Conclusion

Employee engagement is very important to an organization's success and therefore something that needs a lot of attention. Work can be a lot about chasing targets and deadlines. But it doesn't have to always be just that. It doesn't always have to be so serious. Practice employee engagement ideas to help boost morale at the workplace. With so many ideas out there, it's easy to start somewhere, and see the benefits grow over time.

****

SEO check:

Title Tag: 10 employee engagement ideas that work

Meta Description : Employee Engagement has a direct impact on the organization's success. And therefore, the need to take care of the employees as they are the reason behind an organization's success

Semantic Keywords : employee engagement ideas, how to improve employee engagement, remote employee engagement activities, employee committee ideas, team engagement ideas, creative ways to engage employees

****