

☆ STELLAR NURSERY DRAGONS ☆

(Alternatively, Star Nanny or Nanny is shorter.)

Space is infinite and Space Dad can't look after all of it. Lately he's been concerned with the formation of new stars. If the process is not properly cared for, the stars do not have a very large lifespan and black holes would pop up more frequently than he would like.

In an attempt to solve this tricky problem, Space Dad has been training our largest exalted dragons in the art of being a Star Nanny. Star Nannies are trained to help speed up the process of star formation by spiraling around cloud masses of stellar nurseries until they form a neat disk, the protostar. It is at this point where the Nanny moves on and searches for the next nursery to look after.

Being titled as a Star Nanny is a significant achievement for many. It is one of the jobs that requires frequent correspondence with Space Dad. He directly relies on the honesty and faith of the Nannies with their reports on the galaxy's data. Its a convenient way to map space and care for stars at the same time. Because the burden may be heavy for some, Nannies are frequently paired to split up the responsibilities.

There is no uniform look that Nannies possess. However many tend to adopt traits of the nurseries that they tend for. After swimming through cloud masses for so long, some of it is bound to stick to you. But after returning back to report data, the mark of an honorable and great Nanny is to be covered in space dust. :-)
