

CONTROLLED MEDICATION

Any controlled medication should remain in the possession of employees during transports for clients who are discharging from the facility until the client is officially out of the care of the employee to prevent potential abuse.

For this reason, it is preferable that clients who are discharging from the facility with controlled medication are transported by employees instead of rideshare services (e.g. Uber Health) because the former is more likely to adhere to possessing such medication for the length of the transport.