However, due to financial constrictions, I had to decline. I still believe I can give myself a quality education through real-world experience in business.

^Below is the message I plan to send in the “additional notes” box that they have when you submit your resume:

For the next 2 weeks, I am willing to work alongside your team, with no expectation of pay, dedicating all my time and energy to getting you sales. This way you get a chance to see how I perform and how I can contribute to your team. I may not have a long sales resume, but I'm eager to learn and eager to prove myself. I believe in my abilities and I believe I can be a real asset to the team.

Let's make it a win-win - you get free help and I get a chance to show you what I can do. Sound like a fair deal?

Thanks for helping me submit the best possible message, G!

I appreciate your feedback 😊
