

Our Agreements: How Do We Want To Be Together?

What are we missing? What would we change?

Be brave. Share ideas that are provisional – that you think at the time may be productive – but which you are willing to outgrow. Share your thoughts even if you think they might not be popular.

Be open. Deeply listen to what others say and to the feelings, experiences and wisdom behind what they say.

Be humble. Recognize that however passionately you hold ideas and opinions, other people may hold pieces of the puzzle that you don't.

Be respectful. Trust the integrity of others, believing they have the right to their opinions (even when different from your own) and valuing others enough to risk sharing ideas.

Be curious. Speak the truth as you see it and ask questions about things you don't know or understand, particularly on topics related to identity, power, and justice.

Reciprocal Responsibility. Be responsible to each other and honour where we are all at in our personal journeys.
