

Swarm and Bee Removal

Listed below are individuals who remove honey bees in the Omaha and surrounding areas and who have specifically requested to have their name and contact information placed on this page.

The Omaha Bee Club offers this information as a service to the community and has not investigated or confirmed the qualifications of those listed below. The Omaha Bee Club does not endorse or warrant the services of anyone on the list. Further, the Omaha Bee Club assumes no liability for services or work those individuals on the list might perform. You assume all liability in hiring any of the individuals listed below.

Please note that those on this list may charge for their services and travel expenses. Bee removal, particularly from structures, requires extensive knowledge of bees as well as specific tools and equipment. In cases where bees cannot be removed and must be destroyed, an exterminator's license could be required.

Beekeepers taking swarms or removing established colonies usually incur additional expenses to be able to make use of the bees, typically the purchase of a new queen; hence such bees are not "free" as is often assumed.
