

The Book Thief

In the meantime, it was Hitler's birthday, which is a day should be celebrated as a grand occasion. There was a parade that night, and unexpectedly, the government demanded to burn all the books sending out message of freedom and thoughts of democracy. Crowds went crazy at the atmosphere worshipping Hitler's greatness and power playing up by Hitler himself. Liesel was put to throw a book into fire as well, but she felt so wrong. She waited until the crowds were all gone and picked up a book. She looked around to see if anyone saw her and found there was a woman looking at her and drove away.

It was a harsh time covering the hiding up, especially for Liesel. She couldn't tell a single word to anyone, even her best friend, Rudy, otherwise Max would definitely be tuned over to the Gestapo. The only thing she could do after school was going straight home without hanging out with Rudy.

to be continued...