Personality

- Eccentric and chatty

Kayce loves filling chatter about his old home, telling all about the species he used to live with. Tends to eagerly overshare facts about birds and reptiles due to this, giving a mix of useful information and also terrifying information, all with a happy demeanor. He's quite sociable, having no problem starting conversations, but often goes a little quiet if any form of flood or rainstorms are brought up, however all it takes is a subject change and he's back to his chatty self.

- Compliant and Neighborly

He loves to be useful! Happy to help anyone with any task. Kayce likes to linger around busy areas in hopes to find someone to help. Sometimes even butting in conversations to ask if there's something needed to be done. He takes rejection pretty well, apologizing if he notices he interrupted something important and will move onto someone else to ask. Because of how eager he is to help, he constantly agrees to any task even if he's unsure he can do it. Being a bit of a pushover due to this, he often overworks himself. Only when he's physically unable to help, will he finally avoid helping until he's better.

History

Born to Kalei and Eldar in a quiet suburban home, Kayce and his sister Chima were raised around a full house of animals, dogs, birds, and even reptiles. Kayce and Chima had their own preferences on who they liked, Chima bonding with the house dog Antler while Kayce had their sights to bond with the family parrot Jungi, admiring the bird's feathers anytime they fell. Kayce and his sister had many freedoms to the outside, exploring as far as they wished with no limits, aside from hunger and the cold nights bringing them back. Life was good till their owners started to pack in a panic to go somewhere, grabbing all the animals, in the midst of chaos, while trying to move Jungi the bird and flew out escaping through the front door. Kayce ran after Jungi despite their owners calling him back, following the bird in hopes of bringing him home to their worried owners. Hours had passed and Kayce had long lost Jungi, the rain was getting heavy, the water flowed around him, eventually reaching high and strong enough to sweep him away.

Now far from his home, Kayce wandered the new land, teaching himself how to hunt with little experience. Living with a new fear of flooding water he heads towards higher elevation. Stumbling on the borders of a group of cats, he is invited to join by a cat named Sunflower after some friendly chatting. Following the cat to their home of the Lavender colony, Kayce felt comforted seeing all the friendly cats, accepting the colony as his new home too.
