

A year of good work

There was never anyone who dared to doubt that Philip VI would be an excellent king. Even the Republicans to the bone, so wistful always last. Philip VI has just celebrated its first anniversary as monarch with a remarkably high score, I would say. However much I try to look for faults and 'buts', can not find them. And if the meeting are peccadillo; so insignificant that they would have to dig with evil so that they can find. I, I was always juancarlista monarchical -not but I stopped being so when the said King heeled to capsize, I see it now as a monarchical felipista -not on merit of the current king. It is well known that Spain does not have the precise figure of a ruler to show its splendor. Our past speaks. But just learned is that we need to make us famous people add up if we are to prosper. Philip VI makes us add. More every day.
