

But from the friendship with Mika, I created a rough picture of what you and your family do for a living and what companies you own. I recently started "copywriting/digital marketing" to help businesses gain attention and monetize." But I lack experience and reputation, and I thought to myself, "Why don't I offer free work to well-known people I know personally and don't ask for money?"so that I can gain experience in this field myself and at the same time help people I know with their online businesses. If you are interested, I will put all my efforts and time into solving the problems you are currently facing in terms of digital marketing or copywriting. After you share your goals and priorities, I work to find a solution for them.

At the end I will show you my project and you decide if this is something for you. If you're not interested, it would be a great help if you could recommend a few companies you know that are facing these issues. Yours sincerely,

Feim