BRIDGE Practice: Reflect on Your Moral Foundations

CHAPTER DEVELOPMENT ACTION

More than 700 CCLers have completed the first training in CCL's new BRIDGE Advocacy Program! Here's an exercise from the second training to help you keep practicing your skills.

For each statement below, pause and consider: How strongly does this resonate with you? Does it feel central, secondary, or relatively unimportant to your moral worldview? How does this show up in your advocacy, conversations, or political preferences?

You may want to rate each statement on a simple scale: 1 = Not important to me, 2 = Somewhat important, 3 = Very important, or 4 = Core part of my moral outlook

🛡️ Care / Harm: "Compassion for those who are suffering is one of the most important virtues."

⚖️ Fairness / Cheating: "When the government makes laws, its first priority should be ensuring everyone is treated fairly."

🤝 Loyalty / Betrayal: "People should remain loyal to their group or team, even when it is difficult."

👑 Authority / Subversion: "Respect for authority is something that all children should be taught."

⚡ Sanctity / Degradation: "People should not do things that are disgusting or degrading, even if no one is harmed."

🗽 Liberty / Oppression: "People should be free from control or domination by others whenever possible."

As you reflect on the statements above, notice:

- Which foundations felt most central to your moral identity?
- Which ones felt less intuitive or less emotionally resonant?
- How might your strongest foundations shape the stories that motivate you, how you frame climate or policy issues, and what arguments you find persuasive—or unpersuasive?

Go deeper into this exercise and apply your most central moral foundations in CCL's BRIDGE Advocacy Program. Your CCL Community dashboard will show your progress on the top right!
