This is a devised piece that I directed and co-wrote with my students. The recording quality wasn't the best, but it shows the hard work the students did. I really wanted to showcase their artistic abilities, so I identified and nurtured each student's unique talents and I empowered them to take ownership of their creative process. In addition to acting, they contributed original dance, music, stand-up comedy sets, and writing. We didn't use any props so we challenged the audience to engage their imaginations, evoking the spirit of Rod Serling's classic television series. There are many first time actors who either never did a play and/or never had a leading role before. None of these students had a background in devised work and they delivered a wonderful performance. See if you can catch the audience participation element we added.
