

There was once a little ice cube. The name of that ice cube was Tim.

Tim was very nice, so nice that everybody wanted to be his friend. Well, let's just say everyone in the school, even the grade fivers, wanted to be his friend!

Tim was a little bit scared of the grade fivers. Also, he didn't want any friends. He just wanted to read peacefully. But it was basically impossible because he lives in Iceworld.

In Iceworld, it was so so loud and so cold, and that's exactly why it is basically impossible to read peacefully.

Anyway, back to everybody wanting to be his friend. The real problem was that he didn't really like people that much. So whenever someone asked to play with him, he just said he was busy, especially when someone asked if he wanted to come over to their house for a play date. So he always said he was going to his grandma's house.

But that was a mistake! His brother found out that he was lying. His brother was a little bit older than him. Also, he was the only one who didn't like Tim.

His brother did the morning announcements at school. So the morning after his brother heard about all the lies that he told, he said that Tim had never gone to his grandma's house, and that Tim was lying about going to grandmother's house. But his brother didn't know that his little brother Tim didn't really like other people. But Tim still felt bad, so he promised that he wouldn't lie again. Everybody forgave him. The part where his brother didn't forgive him is a whole other story.

But anyway, everybody forgiving him meant he couldn't lie, and he had to play with them almost every day. But it was worth it because his other choice was everybody being mad at him. And nobody wants everyone in the school to be mad at them. And he can't have a bad childhood, because when he is a grown-up, he wants to be a Superman, and he can't be a Superman with a bad childhood.

By the way, if you were wondering, at the start, what Tim was reading about was Superman books. That's what inspired him to become a Superman. Everyone could tell he wanted to be a Superman when he grew up. He wore a cape to school every day. He called it his awesome cape, and everybody knew that because he wore it to school every day. He kind of bragged about it, and that is one thing nobody forgave him for, but that is a whole other story. Anyway, after all that had happened, it's kind of crazy, but everyone forgot about it, but his brother turned out to be a Super Villain. In every one of their fights, the good guy won. Being a superhero made him say that it's not the end of the world to have a friend. And you know how he didn't really like people at the start, if you were wondering it's because everyone was a bully to him in grade one. But now that's all over because he has so many friends.
