

Growing up is weird
It's weird like you wake up one day
In a different bed
In a different city
Surrounded by different strangers
And still search for certain faces in crowds turn in your seat to whisper jokes to phantoms lose your way down familiar paths and streets you've never walked But swear you know how to navigate Like you're a misplaced puzzle piece Trying to fit a different picture