Those who attend Bethel Baptist are already members, and anyone is able to become a member. They plan to host discipleship, a free barbeque, and do lots of outreach.
      iii. Senator Stein asked how many people are currently interested in the organization.
         1. There are currently eight interested in the organization and around sixty students who already attend Bethel Baptist.
      iv. Finance Chair Delahoyde moves to approve.
         1. Approved in roll call vote.
   B. Public Comments
      i. Collin Nickels introduced himself as a member of the Mike Huether Public Service Academy at SDSU and mentioned that it had come to their attention that there has been a problem in the community of people ripping trees from the ground. They have developed a service project where they will be planting young trees at the Brookings Nursery for the city to plant around town next year. This will take place on Sunday October 18th at 1pm and they will be partnering with the Sustainability, and Geography clubs for this project. He urged everyone to reach out to him at collin.nickels@jacks.sdstate.edu if they are interested in making a donation or volunteering at the event.

ii. Government Affairs Chair Mollison asked if they had spoken with the city council on the matter.
    1. Yes, they had a meeting with the head of the Parks Department for the city and will be collaborating on the event. Everyone who wants to help must fill out a liability waiver for the city.
iii. Government Affairs Chair Mollison asked for the date and time of the project.
    1. The project will take place on Sunday October 18th at 1pm at the Brookings Nursery.
iv. President Spier mentioned that this has been a topic in the Senate in the past and urged everyone to leave the public trees alone.
v. Ian Brueggeman introduced himself as the president of the Robotics club and explained how the recent State Motor Pool policy changes negatively affects the club. The new changes prohibit student employees from driving motor pool vehicles to events that aren't student sponsored. This makes it difficult for the club to attend some of their competitions which take place all over the country.
vi. Senator Fasen asked Ian Brueggeman if he could spell his name.
    1. Ian Brueggeman reminded everyone of his name and spelled it out for Senator Fasen.

I. Advisors

i. Bylander:
    1. Provided some clarification on the way an abstinence vote works. It does not affect the final vote count and you should abstain only when there is a conflict of interest, not when there is a concern of hurt feelings or being on the record. Ultimately, everyone has the right to vote how they want, but should try to make the most informed decision possible.
    2. Mentioned that Sanderson Gardens is looking to give away some gourds and encouraged any student organizations to take advantage of the opportunity and use them for their Hobo Day Floats. Urged them to reach out to him if they are interested.

J. Committees

IX. UNFINISHED BUSINESS

A. Amendment 26-1-A

i. Vice President Christoffels moves to approve.

ii. Vice President Christoffels moves to amend the amendment to correct the language to accurately reflect the location of the change in the bylaws.
    1. Approved in voice vote.

iii. Chief of Staff Sharples-Schmidt moves to amend the amendment to reflect how other Students' Association committees function.
    1. Amendment 26-1-A (As Amended)

iv. Chief of Staff Sharples-Schmidt explains that this amendment would change the amendment so either the President or Vice President serve on the Finance Committee, but not both simultaneously.
v. Senator Fasen asks why both the President and Vice President serve on the Finance Committee in the original amendment.
    1. Vice President Christoffels explains that this is because the President takes minutes and provides input, and the Vice President votes. She explains that the original amendment would update the bylaws to reflect the way it has recently been practiced.
vi. Senator Fasen asks why the committee does not take minutes, and why the president was chosen to take minutes.
    1. President Spier answers that it is because the President is a non-voting member.
    2. Vice President Christoffels adds that the President has the time to take the minutes.
vii. Senator Andrews expresses her support for the amendment and mentions that she thinks it is a poor rationale to update policies to reflect current practices. She adds that she thinks this amendment better fits the way some other things function and would alleviate some of the burden on the President and Vice President.
viii. Finance Chair Delahoyde mentions that he will be speaking as the Finance Chair and not a Senator. He has received some feedback from over half the senators that were on the Finance committee last year. The concerns revolved around not being able to voice their opinions and feeling a bit of a power dynamic due the presence of both the President and Vice President on the Committee. He mentioned that it is important that senators who sit on the committee feel free to express their opinions.
ix. Senator Fasen asked if both Finance Chair Delahoyde and Vice President Christoffels were voting members of the senate.
    1. Finance Chair Delahoyde responded that they are both voting members of the Senate.
x. Senator Fasen asked if they would be abstaining due to a conflict of interest on this vote.
    1. Finance Chair Delahoyde mentioned that he does not vote on the Finance Committee.
xi. Senator Fasen clarified that he meant the vote on this amendment.
    1. Finance Chair Delahoyde said that they would not be abstaining.
xii. Vice President Christoffels voiced some concern about the amendment due to the nature of how the Finance Committee functions. The President and Vice President are privy to many conversations that revolve around finance, and provide insight on the Finance Committee. She mentioned that though it may seem like they are trying to frame things in specific ways it is because they have a deeper understanding of things that are taking place on a University scale. She also mentioned that they both sit on different committees and thus have different levels of insight.
xiii. Senator Derenge noted that the President and Vice President were elected for a reason and it is important they both sit on the committee because of the conversations that are a part of that other members of the senate aren't. Mentioned that this will affect the bylaws and future years and that it is a disservice to not let the President and Vice President know what is happening with the Finance Committee.

xiv. Chief of Staff Sharples-Schmidt explained that his initial reasoning for the amendment was due to the contradiction in the bylaws. His initial correction would have had either the President or Vice President serve on the committee as an ex-officio member. However, due to the lack of a clear original intention behind the bylaws section he decided to compromise by writing the amendment to include them as a voting member. Reminded everyone that this was also done to be in accordance with the way the other committees work, outside of the UAFBC, which is a very unique committee.
    1. President Spier clarified that the Vice president is an ex-officio on other senate committees.
xv. Senator Stein asks Chief of Staff Sharples-Schmidt if he has a backup plan for how minutes will be taken with the President's absence.
    1. Chief of Staff Sharples-Schmidt responds that he could take the minutes.
xvi. Senator Stein asks who would take the minutes in future years, and how it would be determined.
    1. It could be determined by the committee.
xvii. Vice President Christoffels mentions that someone could be found to take the minutes, but because of the intense conversations that take place the minutes may not be taken accurately.
xviii. Senator Stein asks if there could be an amendment made to the amendment currently on the table that amends the original amendment.
    1. After some clarification President Spier confirms that that would be possible.
xix. Senator Stein moves to amend the secondary amendment made by Chief of Staff Sharples-Schmidt to include that the President would sit on the Finance Committee in an advisory capacity.
xx. Senator Fasen clarifies that the proposed amendment is in response to the lack of a determined minutes taker on the Finance Committee.
    1. Senator Stein affirms that this is only partially true, and that it also would allow the President to take minutes and provide insights to the conversation.
xxi. Senator Andrews makes a point of order that there was no second to Senator Stein's amendment and affirms that discussion should not continue until a second is heard.
    1. Seeing a second the discussion is allowed to continue.
xxii. Vice President Christoffels explains that Stein's proposed tertiary amendment would allow the President to sit on the Finance Committee in an advisory capacity, and the Vice President would remain a voting member; this is similar to the way the Finance Committee currently functions.
xxiii. President Spier notes that she will begin discussion and that everyone will have two rights to the discussion.
xxiv. Senator Loofe expresses her support for Senator Stein's amendment.
xxv. Senator Derenge expresses her concern that, due to the lack of following procedures in the past, the advisory capacity of the President may not be honored as a rule due to their presence. She notes that the concern of intimidation would not go away because their presence would remain.
xxvi. Senator Fasen makes a point of clarification to determine whether senators will be limited to two discussion rights for the entire amendment, or just the tertiary amendment.

1. President Spier clarifies that the discussion rights mentioned apply to the tertiary amendment proposed by Senator Stein, and will “reset” when it has passed or failed.

xxvii. Finance Chair Delahoyde explains that he agrees with Senator Derenge, and that if the tertiary amendment were passed it would not make any real changes. He mentions that as the Finance Chair he should be up to date on Finance related information that would be relevant for the committee, and that two informed non-biased representatives (the Finance Chair and the President) would be unnecessary.

xxviii. Senator Fasen explains that he believes the tertiary amendment is a response to the concern of the lack of a minutes taker, and that it would undercut the intention of the secondary proposed by Chief of Staff Sharples-Schmidt to have only one of the elected representatives present. He affirms that we should appoint a minutes taker that would not be the President.

1. President Spier advises Senator Fasen that making a motion at this time would incur further confusion and any more motions should be held until the tertiary amendment is voted on.

xxix. Senator Fasen explains that he did not intend to make a motion.

xxx. Advisor Bylander makes a point of order that no further motions may be made, and that the current motion must be voted on first.

xxxi. Senator Stein rescinds her previous motion.

xxxii. Finance Chair Delahoyde makes a point of clarification that discussion would reset.

1. President Spier confirms that discussion would reset on the secondary amendment.

xxxiii. Vice President Christoffels affirms that she opposes the secondary amendment and explains that discussion in the Finance Committee is very fast paced. There often isn’t time for the President, Vice President, and Finance Chair to meet before the Finance Committee, so having all of them present in each of the meetings is very important. Reminds everyone that the President was also an elected position.

xxxiv. Finance Chair Delahoyde clarifies that he does have time to meet before the Finance Committee, and explains that he often meets with the clubs before they present at the Finance Committee. He explains that he could bring his notes from those meetings to the President and Vice President, rather than keeping them to himself until the Finance Committee meets. He also details how the process for funding works, and reminds everyone that every Finance Committee decision must be approved by the Senate.

xxxv. Vice president Christoffels asks when the Finance Chair receives the presentations from clubs requesting funding.

1. Finance Chair Delahoyde answers that he receives their reasoning for funding and other details in his meetings with the club, but does not have their full presentation until later.

xxxvi. Vice President Christoffels explains that the President cannot voice her opinion in the Senate, and thus it is essential that the President is able to voice her opinion on the Finance Committee. She also explains that without having access to the presentations in advance it is difficult to have effective discussion regarding the clubs, and states that most of the discussion taking place in the Finance Committee regards the aforementioned presentations.

xxxvii. Senator Loofe asks if the President would be able to get information from the Finance Committee since it is confidential.

1. Finance Chair Delahoyde explains that factual information can be relayed, but personal feelings and opinions cannot.

xxxviii. Senator Fasen asks why the Finance Committee is confidential.
1. Finance Chair Delahoyde answers that it encourages senators to share their opinions without fear of public backlash.

xxxix. Senator Andrews reminds everyone that they are supposed to represent their constituents, but also collaborate with other senators. Explains that the senate should not be reliant on one voice for their opinions.

xl. Senator Derenge reminds everyone that this change will affect the future and encourages everyone to think about how they would feel not having an elected voice to give input on the committee.

xli. Chief of Staff Sharples-Schmidt clarifies that the decision to have either the President or Vice President serve on the Committee was made to align with the practices of other senate committees. The decision to have them as a voting member instead of an ex-officio was made because the committee is very important, and they still deserve to have some voting power behind their opinion. He also explained that the concern of lacking a minutes taker was not major, as other members already take notes and could take minutes if needed. He also reminded everyone that the president already voices her opinion on the Finance Committee as an ex-officio while taking minutes, she simply doesn't vote with her opinion.

xlii. Finance Chair Delahoyde explains that no other committees have a designated minutes taker.

xliii. Senator Loofe asks Chief of Staff Sharples-Schmidt if his proposed amendment would allow the President and Vice President as a voting member or an ex-officio.
1. Chief of Staff Sharples-Schmidt clarifies that his amendment would allow only one of them to sit on the committee, but they would be a voting member.

xliv. Senator Andrews asks if another tertiary amendment could be made since the previous tertiary amendment made by Senator Stein was rescinded.
1. President Spier clarifies that this would be possible.

xlv. Senator Andrews moves to amend the secondary amendment to include a section that would allow the Finance Chair to appoint an official minutes taker that would have no speaking rights. She explains that this would be to address the concern of not having a minutes taker present on the Finance Committee.

xlvi. President Spier asks Senator Andrews if she would be implying that the President would not be allowed to take the minutes.
1. Senator Andrews clarifies that it implies only what was written in the tertiary amendment.

xlvii. Finance Chair Delahoyde mentions that the minutes taker would have to be someone who has signed the Code of Ethics due to the confidentiality of the Finance Committee.
1. Senator Andrews notes that as written, the tertiary amendment would allow the Finance Chair to appoint a minutes taker that is not a part of the senate. She asks if this could be changed.
2. President Spier explains that the motion would have to be rescinded, and cannot be amended.

xlviii. Senator Andrews rescinds her previous motion.

xlix. Senator Andrews moves to amend the secondary amendment to include a section that would allow the Finance Chair to appoint a minutes taker for the Finance Committee that is a voting member of the senate.
l. Senator Stein notes that it is unrealistic to ask a senator to attend all Finance Committee meetings, but not have a vote. She recommends this tertiary amendment be changed to a policy that would be more easily practiced.
li. Senator Fasen asks Finance Chair Delahoyde if there is anyone interested in this kind of position.
    1. Finance Chair Delahoyde explains that this kind of role was not present in the past, since the President took minutes.
lii. Senator Derenge explains that while it is important to address how minutes are taken, it is also possible for a voting member to take minutes and be unbiased. She explains that the minutes taker could be a voting member of the committee.
liii. Senator Dunn agrees with Senator Stein and Derenge, and explains that in the Student Success Committee a records keeper was appointed at the beginning of the meeting, and it didn't affect their ability to engage in discussion.
liv. Senator Fasen asks Senator Andrews to clarify if the initial intention of her tertiary amendment was to rectify the lack of an official minutes taker.
    1. Senator Andrews responds that it was meant to address some of the concerns brought up by the senate about a lack of clarity on how the minutes will be taken.
lv. Vice President Christoffels explains that while she appreciates the sentiment behind the tertiary amendment, she believes it undercuts the necessity for the President to have a voice on the committee.
lvi. Communications Chair Johnson expresses his concern that the tertiary amendment has strayed "into the weeds" a bit when it comes to clarifying everything. He notes that outside of the Chief of Staff for the Senate meetings, no Committees have designated minutes takers, and affirms that this tertiary amendment is unnecessary.
lvii. Senator Andrews rescinds her previous motion. lviii. Communications Chair Johnson asks for clarification on if discussion would reset again.
    1. President Spier confirms that discussion will again be reset.
lix. Finance Chair Delahoyde explains that he could take minutes if necessary.
lx. Senator Andrews moves the previous question.
    1. Approved in roll call vote.
lxi. Vice President Christoffels declares that she is no longer in favor of the amendment after changes made by the secondary amendment. She believes that it disregards the initial purpose of her amendment, and undercuts the importance of having the voices of the President and Vice President serve on the Finance Committee.
lxii. Government Affairs Chair Mollison echoes the sentiment made by Vice President Christoffels and explains that she also is not in support of the altered amendment.
    1. President Spier asks for clarification from Robert's Rules of Order if a third reading is necessary since the prime sponsor of the amendment is no longer in support of it.
lxiii. Finance Chair Delahoyde moves to wave the third reading.
    1. President Spier clarifies that it has not been determined if a third reading is necessary.

lxiv. Chief of Staff Sharples-Schmidt expresses his support for the amendment, and explains that it was not meant to “take away anyone's voice”, but reflect the practices of other senate committees.
    1. Advisor Willis explains that because the amendment has substantially changed a third reading should take place.
    2. President Spier asks if it is at the discretion of the chair, or if it is required.
    3. Advisor Willis explains that it is unclear, but is likely required.

lxv. Senator Derenge explains that due to this immense discussion on the topic, it would be useful to have another reading. She also encouraged senators to focus on the overall changes that will come into effect as a result of this amendment and not their personal feelings towards the members of the senate involved.

lxvi. Finance Chair Delahoyde moves to table the amendment to the next meeting on the 19th.

lxvii. President Spier explains that she is the chair of the Senate and is unbiased, but that she was elected to her position. She explains that if the President is causing a power imbalance on the Finance Committee it is the President and not the system that is the problem, and that should be communicated to the President.
    1. Approved in voice vote.

B. SDSF Resolution 26-1-R
    i. Communications Chair Johnson moves to approve ii. Government Affairs Chair Mollison expressed her support for the resolution and thanked the members of the public that attended the meeting to speak about how the recent motopool changes affect their club.
        1. Approved in roll call vote.

C. Official 2026-27 Budgeting Philosophy
    i. Finance Chair Delahoyde moves to approve on behalf of the Finance Committee.
    ii. Finance Chair Delahoyde explained that this was edited substantially from last year and noted that the change to prioritize fundraising is meant to prioritize fundraising efforts, and not fundraising return. He also explained that this will determine the guidelines for the Finance Committee going forward.
    iii. President Spier reminded everyone that this is just a guide.
    iv. Advisor Willis mentioned that in the guidelines it mentions that priority will be given to student leaders who organize events independently with little advisor oversight and asked for clarification on why that is the case.
        1. Finance Chair Dalhoyde answered that last year there were some advisors who were more involved than the students, and that this change reflects the desire to prioritize student leaders who are passionate about acquiring funding.
    v. Advisor Willis mentions that UPC and SA are in contradiction with many of the guidelines in the Budgeting Philosophy.
        1. Finance Chair Delahoyde mentioned that UPC and SA are unique exceptions as they function differently than other clubs.
    vi. Advisor Willis notes that stipends are not a priority, and yet both SA and UPC have their stipends funded.
        1. Finance Chair Delahoyde explains that the reasoning for that is the same, and that UPC and SA are exceptions. He also mentions that the decision was made so clubs would not be encouraged to introduce stipends to fund students.
    vii. Senator Fasen asks how a stipend is defined.

1. Finance Chair Delhoyde explains that it is a determined amount given to an elected position and is distinct from a scholarship.

viii. Advisor Willis explained that student organizations undergo a strict process to determine if they are able to have a stipend or whether compensation would better be made hourly.

ix. Senator Fasen asks President Willis how this Budgeting Philosophy is different from other Budgeting Philosophies, and where it is different.
    1. Advisor Willis pointed out several places on the document where SA and UPC would not meet the guidelines in the Budgeting Philosophy.

x. Senator Fasen asked if there were any ex-officios that would have anything to say about the budgeting philosophy.

xi. Finance Chair Delahoyde mentions that when SA and UPC are discussed in the Finance Committee it is a very different type of discussion than other student organizations.
    1. Approved in roll call vote.

D. IDC New Venture Request FY27.pdf

i. Finance Chair Delahoyde moves to approve on behalf of the Finance Committee.

ii. Finance Chair Delahoyde Friendly amended the document to reflect proper dates.

iii. Senator Derenge moves to amend “Wednesday” to “Thursday” to better reflect the actual times the meetings took place.

iv. President Spier combines the two amendments into one.
    1. Approved in voice vote.

v. Finance Chair Delahoyde noted that the IDC were present at the meeting, and thanked them for their attendance. He also explained that the 600 dollars they were awarded was for their practices in the Wellness Center. Mentioned some background on how the IDC is moving from being on the Student Connection and Engagement Center budget to being on the SA budget.
    1. Approved in roll call vote.

E. IRC Special Allocation Request FY27.pdf

i. Finance Chair Delahoyde moves to approve on behalf of the Finance Committee.

ii. Finance Chair Delahoyde moves to amend the request to reflect proper dates and days of the week.
    1. Approved in voice vote.

iii. Finance Chair Delahoyde explained that IRC has done International Night in previous years, and that due to the success of other events they requested funding to assist in doing one this year. He explained that some of the reasoning behind not fully approving them was due to concerns about the lack of preparation and lead time behind the event.

iv. Advisor Willis asked if IRC articulated any fundraising efforts they have attempted and what they anticipate for ticket sales.
    1. Finance Chair Delahoyde answered that they didn’t know what ticket prices or sales would be. The number that was decided on was determined after discussion about some of the plans behind the event, and was a result of concerns that more planning was needed. He mentions that due to the small executive board fundraising is not something that is very possible.

v. Advisor Willis makes a point of clarification and notes that they have 102 active members that can fundraise for the organization.
    1. Finance Chair Delahoyde mentions that it was brought up how hard it was to get those members to engage in fundraising.

vi. IRC Ex Officio Kaul clarified that it has been very difficult in the past to get international students to fundraise for the club. He explained that once plans are in motion they will jump on board, but they have to "see it to believe it".
    1. Approved in roll call vote.
