

Since I retired, I have been searching for that "just right" volunteer job. I just want to give back to the community a little something.

I have looked around a long time & think I might have found it. It had to be one where I didn't feel like it was a chore. Something enjoyable. Something a little different from the ordinary day-in, day-out routine.

At last I am truly comfortable being a volunteer. I no longer feel like my talents are being wasted on non-meaning, irrelevant trivialities. I feel good again.

I have found the perfect retirement job ...
