Is an ALR hearing important to winning the case?

YES! An ALR hearing is sort of a preview of what the officer might say if the case went to trial.

The ALR hearing happens early on in the process.

At the hearing, we are allowed to question the officer(s) under oath and on the record and many times we can get good testimony from them that we can then use to help make the DWI case go away completely. This is a pretty complicated part of effective DWI representation and it is extremely important to have an attorney that has handled hundreds and hundreds of ALR hearings.

This can potentially make or break your entire case.
