The 2nd plane looked like a 737. My bet is terrorists. There's no way that was an accident.

Yehoodaddict The news is that one plane crashed into each tower. The Au Gratin	stations are reporting this as a terrorist attack. ABC (maybe the other stations, too) has actual footage of the second plane hitting the second tower.

The scary thing is, no one will know if there are more out there until they get all of the planes on the ground.

A domestic airliner is a HUGE plane with alot of Jet Fuel. There is nothing in plave in your average US city to deal with one before it hits the ground, and who would make the call to shoot down a planeload of innocent travellers...

Its very clever, and its hitting the United States where it is most vulnerable, and there is little we can do to stop it until its over...hopefully it is.

Supposedly a huge aprt of the WTC just collpased!!!!

Anyone know where Broad Street is in Manhattan? I have a sister who works there that I cannot get a hold of.

There may be thousands of deaths before this day is over.
There is no overreacting going on here.

Both planes at the WTC were hijacked from American Airlines in Dallas (going to LA). The second plane had 60 passengers.

Thanks all for sharing what you've found out. I am at work and I probably would not have found out as much if you didn't. Were being released from work, the roads are already backed up and people are frantic as well. I live 25 minutes from the city and I can only imagine the chaos thats going on close to it.

I am sure I can speak for us all when I say that they thoughts and prayers of the nation are with the people of New York City and the personel at the Pentagon.

EVERYONE: Remember where you are today, remember your feelings as you hear the news roll in, fix it in you mind because there are not many time where you can say that you were there when the world changed. Today the world has changed, and its not pretty. We now know what Americans felt on that "Day that would live in infamy." Remember this so that you can convey it to your children and your grandchildren. And I am not being overly dramatic. The United States has been proven vulnerable today, the last time that happened we spent the next 5 years embroiled in a world war that changed the face of the world forever. When the human toll comes in the American public will give the government Carte Blanc to resolve and rettaliat as they see fit.

Make no mistake, the world tomorrow will be a different place than the world today. What will come of this? Who can say? But whatever the results, good or bad, remember it, freeze it in your mind, so you can say you were there the day the world changed, and you can remember the way it was.

And also remember, it's not over until all the airliners in the US are on the ground.

I was glad that I was late for work. at 8:45 AM, I walked out of the subway into the concourse of the WTC when I saw billows of smoke rushing towards me and people screaming.

That was the first plane.

Then I got outside into pandemonium. There were people jumping out of the buildings because of the fire. It was disturbing.

After the second explosion people cleared the area and I got home safely.

War? I doubt it. We have no reason to declare war when we don't know who the enemy is. Perhaps WE are our own worst enemy. That Bin Ladin fellow did warn of an attack last week. If he did pull it off, he just signed his death warrant...

We all laughed off OKC when the Federal Building got bombed..."It CAN'T happen here", we all said. Well it has. There is no need to panic, but it is time to re-think priorities. It happened in WWII, it's about to happen again...

...And I will miss playing Windows...

Carry on...

In Atlanta, I work one block from CNN, and so far some buildings are being evacuated and CNN has a tremendous amount of security in evidence. I just heard that the Russell Building and the Atlanta Journal Constitution are being evacuated. Figure that the last place a terrorist wants to hit is the major news artery that gives them all this spectacular coverage. I am

If you have my cell, you can try it too. Somehow I got a message from Kitty that got thru.

Please everyone be OK and be safe. Try and stay away from any major area that could be a terrorist target. Including Train stations!!!!

I have no idea who you are, but while this may be the result of US policies abroad, don't even, for a second, start to imply that this was in any way deserved, or that we had it coming...

The time for analysis of our political policies will come, but it's not today, so please don't start. Today is for thinking about all of the people that have died and been injured, and for their loved ones.

NOTHING can justify these events and to suggest that "Well they were just retaliating for US actions"....that just cheapens the whole thing.

Mourne today, change tomorrow.

I have to agree with Lt. Jim. Someone is going to pay dearly. The US may have been self interested it's past policies, but it's been 50+ years since we have had to really secure ourselves against foreign aggression....

interesting things happen when you stab at the sleeping giant.

good? Once we come to the conclusion who was at fault for all this, and the logical course of action is clouded by the heat of wanting retaliation, How good will the retaliation be? Who can we declare war upon? Are we ready to declare war? How will we retaliate? How will this affect the rest of the world?

These are things that we have to consider - it won't be easy for the higher ups to decide the correct course of action, though action is needed.

Cleveland checking in. According to Mayor White, there is a hijacked plane on the tarmac at Hopkins Airport that has been evacuated (thank God) and is being searched for a bomb. All of NY and DC, you are in my prayers. Thanks to everyone for updating with info because all the news sites are unreachable. Everyone in my office has been stopping by for the latest. The university has been closed (CWRU) and I'm outta here. Be safe and smart everyone. Now is the time to put aside differences and help each other. This is a time that will test our character.

The time for analysis of our political policies will come, but it's not today, so please don't start. Today is for thinking about all of the people that have died and been injured, and for their loved ones."

I knew I shouldn't said what I felt...I'm sorry that after feeling sadness came a huge sense of guilt... but please do not say we didn't have this coming...for every news report that shows people being killed by countries using our weapons to every country's history that we felt was our god given right to change there are going to be alot of angry people who want to get us back...we pay the taxes, we made the decisions, people die...

the only difference is now people are dying here at home and we care, it's too bad we don't care when it happens elsewhere especially when it's because of us...and yes, i still feel guilty...

Dave from San Fran was visiting and flying back home this morning...

Steve from Toronto was flying to NYC this morning... Haven't heard from either.

According to the news all flights to the US area being diverted back to Canada... I am wonder what Steve & Dave are doing.

I have had calls from friends from as far away as Isreal making sure Iwas not traveling and was not in NYC this week... I am OK.. I am so worried about everyone else though.

Toronto is practically shutting down too... the CN Tower was shut down many places are sending people home and the subways are running at rush hour pace... many roads are jammed with traffic of people trying to get home... I can't imagine the sheer insanity of NYC right now.

If you don't have to go anywhere - stay put!
Please logon with your name not as a guest...let people know you're OK. and my heart goes out to all of you. I am glad you are all offering to help each other with a place to crash.

This doesn't take much analysis----the Palestinians, who the US expects Israel to make nice with, are dancing in the streets, and passing out sweets to children to celebrate this horrific event. I think the Europeans should give them even MORE aid.

well, looks like most of downtown atlanta is evacuated now. The CDC is evacuated, as are several of the large universities (UGA in Athens, Emory, Georgia State), but the Capital building is still in session last I heard.

A friend of mine's brother who lives on the upper east side says that he has a friend who lives near Chambers street and that he went to his apartment on the way uptown and saw a wing from the airplane sticking out of his apartment. Apparently water and food are in short supply already, on the upper east side anyway.

Is this how pearl harbor felt? or much much worse?

Seattle? Not true. I would have heard. I have a very good view of the entire city. I see nothing wrong, and I hear nothing local on the radio, except that the airport's shut down like all the others.

I drove up the turnpike just before the first tower fell... actually as it was falling ... i was on a crest, just right by newark airport... when it came down. the pike was pandamonium... i was passed up by a frantic driver going north bound while i was going 100mph. i was attempting to get home in north jersey...but i had to turn around since the turnpike was closed down at the holland tunnel exit. newark airport has police walking around with rifles... state troopers are everywhere out here. helicopters are flying in and out of the University hosiptal i was just down in brooklyn last night picking up a cable modem... i then took the battery tunnel over into city to visit gypsy jenn... and drove right by the towers on the west side highway. is jenn okay?

even growing up in this area, i look like a tourist when around them... looking up and marveling. i cant believe they are gone.

my father one time told me that he remembers when he used to look at he skyline from hackensack NJ and NOT see the WTC. I just assumed that would be a memory for him... i cant believe this is happening lets pray for the people that did not survive

I just got word - Dave from San Fran's flight never left the ground... and he is safe at Alana's house. He is stuck here in Toronto for who knows how long but he's OK. He forgot his passport when he left SF and now just only has a faxed copy which I doubt will be enough... but we cross that bridge later. Important thing is he's not in the air.

Still no word from Steve Wellman.

Thanks for this reminder. This is really important. I am on Washington heights checking in. my school is in the lock down. sh*t load of security here(i go to a Jewish school). just wanna second the motion for the blood donation. if your have type O then you should defiantly go. i can't go, not sure what my blood type, they dont want to bring in more people than they need to into already crowded buildings.

I think you can go to any Red Cross center, and most outlying hospitals to give blood. Confirm this with them when you get there, but as far as I know, you won't be eligible if you:

- 1) are under 100 lbs
- 2) have been in a farm area in a malaria country in the last 6 months (may be longer, I don't remember)
- 3) have HIV

I don't know of any other way to help from outside the area, except to make a monetary donation to the Red Cross and maybe St. Vincent's Hospital in Manhattan. They're going to be really swamped with the shelters (need to buy/get food, blankets, beds) for the people that live in the area, and with dealing with all the bodies.

I'm so horrified even writing that last sentence.

No news yet on who was on the flight into SFO. They're evacuating the airport, though. Worried about bombs.

Apparently the Red Cross is asking that you call before you donate blood. Because all UD flights have been grounded it is difficult to ship the blood to NYC, so if you are not in the New York area you might want to check in before you go to the donation centers.

westmorland county got a 911 call from a guy who locked himself in the bathroom of that plane, he confirmed it was highjacked and it wasnt a hoax. he said he heard a noise and there was smoke.

they were a little over 10 minutes out of pittsburgh, and they were not responding to radio calls, its thought that it might have been headed for us.

a lot of downtown pittsburgh has been evacuated, tunnels were closed, and it was really crazy for a while. things seem to be settling down here....

all is well, but some planes are still missing...

however, if you are suffering form trigger finger. there are only so many people that could pull this kind of operation off. and i am sure that FBI and CIA knows who they are. rest assured there will not have a peaceful life. they will be hunted down, and hopefully brought in front of the court and not just assassinated.

the sad part is that unfortunately , there are people out there who are willing to kill civilians just to make a point.

Glad to hear Zeno and Gary are ok and thank god I don't work in the WTC anymore.
It's a weird feeling to realize in an emergency that we in Manhattan are trapped on the island w/all the trains locked up.
I must admit I am still concerned about the Empire State building being a target.

there are no new reports of hijacking. In total, four commercial flights were hijacked. Two crashed into WTC, one into Pentagon, and one south of Cincinnati. An earlier report indicated the Cincinnati crash may have been a plane that was originally sighted as a hijacked flight headed for DC.

American Flight #11, BOS > LAX American Flight #77, Dulles > LAX United Airlines Flight #93, Newark > SFO
United Airlines Flight #175, BOS > LAX

There were no counts available for people on board flight #93, but the passengers and crew members of the other flights totaled 219 people. There is no estimate of how many thousands were lost in the WTC and surrounding neighborhoods and in the Pentagon.

God be with us all. The world as we know it is changing and will never be the same again.

The country is in a panic even government buildings in Denver, CO are evacuated.
I really hope this does not escalate into anything more tragic. My boss's mom called up crying she said "I don't want to have to live through this again, I remember Pearl Harbor" That was frightening to hear. I don't understand politics or government and I surely don't understand fanatics or religious zealots. I just wish we could all get along as a planet under Mother Earth's care, we are all so much more similar than we think, why is peace so hard?

I just want the skyline I grew up with back and people not gone. This is a shocking tragedy and my heart goes out to everyone who has lost anyone involved in it.

Blessings to all the emergency workers who also risk their lives to help others!

Blessings on us all give us streagth to deal with whatever may be ahead.

and how far reaching the effects of today's events will be.

Also to say to everyone to watch the news, watch the tragedy, take all of the emotion and the horror in, and process it, so that when it comes time for the American people to decide what happens to our country as a result if this attack, we do it with minds and hearts that no longer stand on the hair trigger that they do today. The United States must protect itself and retaliate against acts of aggression aimed towards it, but the degree to which we do this, and the method used, remain to be seen. The next few days will be very turbulent as the horror and shock translate into fear and anger. Stories of tragedy and terror will be everywhere, but there will also be stories of heroism and bravery in the face of unimaginable odds...It's important to remember that one of the funny things about this country is that no matter how divided we stand in everyday life, in the face of adversity we have an incredible ability to work together and overcome the most incredible odds.

In the past, when the population of the US has been galvanized and solidly together, behind the actions of the government, some incredible and amazing things have been accomplished. We pulled the world back from the brink of fascist domination, we put a man on the Moon in less than a decade. The United States, when truly united, is an awesome force to unleash, we need to remember that, and use that force wisely, and it will take clear heads to do that. So watch, listen, absorb, feel, talk about everything you can so that when the time comes for you, us, the citizens of the United States, to make decisions about how we go forward in the world of tomorrow, we do it with full knowledge of these events, but without the anger, shock and fear of the moment.

And always, pray for the victims, their families, and their friends, donate blood, and do what you can. I heard an estimate that there might have been as many as 10,000 people working in each tower, and 5,000 visitors in the WTC overall. That's 25,000 potential casualties in the WTC alone, no one in the US is going to escape being touched by this in some way.

And keep the news flowing here, we all have swing-friends that we are worried about in NYC, let us know you/they are OK. I am not sure there is much we can do at the moment, but to all the NYC'ers; you have a big ol' National Lindy Hop family behind you, keep us all in the loop and let us know what we can do to help.

Mexico-U.S. Border Closed, Flights Canceled

MEXICO CITY (Reuters) - The long land border between the United States and Mexico was partially closed and all flights from Mexico to the United States suspended after attacks on U.S. landmarks on Tuesday morning, U.S. and Mexican officials said.

``The American side is closed. That is outside our jurisdiction. Mexico closed nothing," said a spokeswoman with Mexico's communications and transport ministry.

Actually, I'm sorry to say that CNN reported that about 150 000 workers and visitors go to the WTC every day. I can't say if that number is accurate but if it is, it's scary..

When I saw the towers crumble and all the devastation on television, I broke down and cried. It's hard for me to think of people being so inhuman. Stay safe dancers, I'm glad to hear that you are ok, even if I don't know you yet. You are in our thoughts.

I finally got released from work about an hour ago. We basically had a lockdown here at Randolph AFB in Texas. From what I understand all military bases are on what is called ThreatCon Delta which is basically a level of security reserved for times when were at war. Theres pritty intense security percautions here. From what I heard we werent even at this threatcon during desert storm/shield.

Unfortunately, most likely this wont be the end of bloodshed. The US wont stand by and let this happen. Someone will pay dearly I fear. As Ogden said this will definately change a lot in the US, and again the last time something of this magnitude happened to the US we ended up in war for years. (Pearl Harbor)

BREAKING NEWS: Lots of explosions going on in Kabul, Afghanistan.

My prayers are with everyone in NY and Washington.

I am so glad to hear that everyone seems to be accounted for, for the most part. I had a few people that I love that I was very worried about, but thankfully they are all accounted for.

The scariest part of all this is the fact that a month from today I am scheduled to fly into Washington DC. I don't know if I can get on the plane now. I'm scared, you guys...this seems so surreal. Classes were cancelled for the most part at SMU today, and we had a very touching vigil at noon on the main quad of the university.

Please know that my thoughts and prayers are with all of you in NYC, DC, and everyone else we don't even know who have been affected by today's horrible tragedy.

With love and faith, historical perspective: in 1944, the Empire State Bldg was run into by a United States C-5 Bomber. It was a very foggy day and navigation equipment was not what it is today. Damage was minimal.

Today's planes were filled with enough fuel to fly across the country. Also, they were probably traveling faster than the 1944 bomber.

Ask me. :)

This morning, it was just another bombing in NYC. During my 10:00 class, the guy next to me was checking the news all class on his mobile. I ran to the labs at 12 to check the news, and I read Yehoodi. You guys have made this so real for me. It's no longer something I saw on the news. It's something that's happening to people who I know. I've never actually met most of you (any of you in NYC), but I still feel like you're a part of my life because of Yehoodi. Thank you for keeping me grounded and real. And thank you so much for the updates, especially the list of who's accounted for. All of you are special to me, and I'm praying for all of you as well as all those who were and are affected by this.

Ogden, a beautiful post on page 3 that sent chills down my spine. I had thought about that before, but for some reason when I read that post it became more real. This is a day that we shouldn't forget. It will be in our kids' history books. I can't imagine what some of you have seen, because I'm sure the news hasn't captured nearly what it's like right now in NYC.

Thinking of you...love to all.

mugsy1274: there's a woman they keep showing on the news who looks like you mugsy1274: but with longer hair eanniemeanie: nah i'm in the office mugsy1274: did other people think it was you?

eanniemeanie: yeah

eanniemeanie: there's even a post on yehoodi.

mugsy1274: it did look like you eanniemeanie: good thing it was not me eanniemeanie: i'd be too terrified to type right now

I am not Sherman

I just got back from Prospect Park.

I kept noticing what a beautiful night it was, how green the grass was, the subliminity of the rolling hills. The sun was setting and I saw a blue heron, some butterflies and lots of happy dogs. Amidst the chirping crickets I saw several fluttering papers fall from the dusk sky with black singed edges that had traveled the sweeping air currents all the way from the twin towers.

This morning, I took the N/R train to where the subway exit blends into the concourse underneath the WTC. At 8:45 AM I got out and started walking to the basement entrance to my building, but saw billows of smoke rushing towards me. People were screaming to get the hell out.

After exiting the building, it was snowing office paper and debris. On Church Street, from the street that borders the eastern block, a gaping hole 10 stories high breathed flame and smoke. Mobs of people were trotting away on the street; some were crying, worried about friends and colleagues. Then I witnessed the first few people, plunging to their deaths, apparently to escape the fire that would have painfully scorched them to death.

By this time most people were gathered around watching the building burn and calling people. I ran into an hysterical colleague who I tried to comfort. We then witnessed more people jumping. Sick of the ghastliness, we went out of sight of the buildings behind Trinity Church on Broadway.

A few minutes later, a second explosion shook the area, and panicked people ran away. It was complete mayhem. People tripped over each other. Mothers were protecting their baby carriages. In the fray I lost touch with my colleague. I was in complete shock, but I managed to walk home safely.

Many people knew I worked at the World Trade Center tower. Thank you all for calling and checking in on me. I am a very lucky person to have so narrowly escaped tragedy.

I do not discount your feelings, but this statement has to be one of the most dim-witted things I've read. Just another bombing in NYC? Are you kidding me? That was your initial reaction? I don't even live in NYC, but the news rocked me to my core. It did that to everyone in this country and abroad. You're telling me that it took posts on this site to shake your soul? How sad.
