18-30 year olds are extremely vulnerable to the pull of transition.

A parent with an under 18 has options, but over that age, all they can do is sit back and watch in horror.

Protect all young people, let's talk about this.

Update: I had someone call and before he even finished his sentence, the woman who answered said "she doesn't work here anymore and she never taught that curriculum". She was unaware of when this teacher stopped working there.

I take it they got many calls today 🖊️

3) I know I'm opening myself up to serious criticism here, but let me be honest with you: If my own son, God forbid, came to me and admitted to doing what Josh Duggar did, I don't know that I'd immediately run to the cops.

Would you? Is it really that simple? The decision to have your child arrested as a sex offender would be an automatic thing for you? Really?

I guess I'm just a horrible person then.

The pedophile scandal in the Catholic Church is not a pedophile scandal. The vast majority of victims are post-pubescent teens and young men. The real problem in the Church that everyone sees and few will say out loud: gay priests.

The media has been trying to separate homosexuality from the Catholic Church scandal for years. This is nonsense, of course. The problem started precisely when they began admitting large numbers of homosexuals into the priesthood.

Actually, when you 1) know that one aspect of grooming can be teaching kids about sex, 2) learn the predatory, pedophlic roots of gender ideology & Queer Theory, & 3) follow @libsoftiktok, it's easy to see that much of what's going on can accurately be called grooming.

Nate Hochman ✓ @njhochman · Apr 5

Broadly speaking, left-wing teachers aren't "grooming" kids. Gender ideology in schools isn't the same thing as "pedophilia." The mainstreaming of these ideas on the Right is a great way to lose an otherwise very winnable culture war issue. It makes us sound like the crazy ones.
