Research Question

If an individual currently wearing SCP 035 attempted to pick up SCP 127, what would happen? Would 127 recognize the individual? Would 127 be hostile against them?

Procedural Statement

"I Agree that I have followed all testing procedures and regulations throughout the duration of this test. I also understand that if a breach of procedure/regulation were to occur during this test that I may and will be punished."

Testing Method

The brief given to the Class D is as follows:

"Alright, Class D,"

"You are to put on SCP 035 once inside the chamber, once the mask is on, pick up SCP 127."

"Should MD be on standby, put the mask on first, let yourself get downed then have the MD revive you. After that, enter the chamber and try to pick up 127."

I asked the combatant to grab the MD which I requested at the checkpoint.

I asked 127 if a CD could pick him up, to which 127 responded with a nod.

After that, the CD entered the chamber and approached SCP 127, once the mask had been placed on. SCP 127 was quite skittish/skeptical of the CD, keeping his distance. I asked 127 to lay down, in order to let the CD pick it up. 127 did such. After the CD picked 127 up, they shot at the targets, as ordered too. SCP 127 didn't react or be hostile towards the CD during this. After that, the CD put 127 down, and the test was concluded.

Conclusion

In conclusion, SCP 127 will not be hostile towards a 035 affected Class D, however, will still act skeptical towards them. This means 127 holds distrust and possible resentment towards SCP 035, this could be due to a person who has befriended 127 in the past has died due to SCP 035. One thing I wish I tested would be introducing the Class D to 127 before putting the mask on the CD.
