

Character Description of Rhodopis

Rhodopis was a beautiful slave girl who lived in Ancient Egypt. Delightfully, her gorgeous pale skin shone as pink as the lotus flower. Her deep, verdant eyes were as green as the great, winding River Nile. Lusciously, the wind blew her blonde hair into tangles. It was as feathery as papyrus. Angelically, her soft white dress hung off her slender body.

Sadly, despite her beauty, inside she was depressed. She was constantly bullied by the mean servant girls. When she was a young girl, she had been snatched by pirates which had made her fearful and frightened. Shyly, she obediently did her jobs and didn't want to cause any trouble. Thankfully, when her day had ended, she danced with the animals- they never talked behind her back.