² Elder Baxter is currently only 65, but is on his second health-related medical leave from full-time service as a General Authority Seventy. The first time, the leave was for cancer, and that could be the case currently. Depending on the current condition of his health and prognosis, granting him emeritus status to devote his full energy to those issues may be a reasonable course of action. I would not necessarily be surprised by either his release or the lack thereof, but thought I'd allow for it in a worst-case scenario.

⁴ It has been somewhat traditional in recent years for the Church to save the bulk of area seventy releases each year for the October General Conference. Generally, those releases have been related to calls to serve as mission presidents or temple presidents, or related to the lengths of their tenure or their ages. There are a few other reasons area seventies might be released this go-round, with those to be explained in subsequent notes.

⁵ These area seventies began serving as mission presidents in July 2020. As a result of that, I anticipate their releases being presented during this General Conference.

⁷ Elder Smith turned 68 in May of this year, and it is rare for the Church to have any area seventies serving past the age of 65, so his release seems probable.

⁸ Elder Worthen is currently serving as the president of BYU-Provo, and has been serving as an area seventy since April 2010. Since a decade is an atypically long period of service for an area seventy, if Elder Worthen's service as president of BYU-Provo continues, it is possible that he could potentially be released as an area seventy and sustained as a new GA Seventy, becoming the first to be so sustained in an October General Conference since 2018.

⁹ Elder Scott's wife passed away in November of last year, so it would make sense, since he's a widower, if he were released this go-round.
