The secret is to make your work area child-friendly yet childproof. ... File folders and old briefcases are great places to stash kids' "important assignments."

PLACES TO MEET:

Virtual Offices: There are a variety of virtual office programs that help you put out a professional image even when your day may be filled with changing diapers and temper tantrums. Most virtual office programs allow you to access your business from anywhere you have internet access, including files, fax, e-mail and phone. A good virtual office program will allow you to create e-mail campaigns and auto responders so your business can run even when you're on the run.

Executive Office Suites: You can easily save 50 percent or more when you lease an executive office suite. You get just the space you need with low upfront costs and short lease terms. It's a great way to keep a home office and still present a professional image. You get access to meeting rooms, office equipment and maybe even a receptionist. They can collect your mail and forward it to your home. You choose the services you want and pay for only what you use. Believe it or not, you can rent your space on an hourly basis each month.

Shared Space: In today's tough financial times, many people are looking for ways to save money. Many people with big offices will sublet space, especially if you have a complementary business. Perhaps they downsized or they rented extra space for their future growth and want to rent it out in the interim. If you're subleasing from a company with similar values, it may help you feel more at home.
