

Captain's Fancy Valentine Sweetheart was created by a Canadian mad scientist. Now she's a U.S. civil servant dedicated to helping unfortunate non-human sapients.

Sweetheart likes organised paperwork, trashy fantasy romance novels, being right, and sticking her head out of moving vehicles. She dislikes illogic, having to take down rampaging clients, and people who flout authority or make sudden movements near her food.

Sweetheart is not an employee of Amaterasu; she occasionally visits to objectively evaluate the living conditions and mental health of one of the organisation's Weird employees in order to determine what aid or intervention (if any) is needed. This usually means Sweetheart does a ride-along on one of their missions.

Good Dog. I get +2 when citing policy to create advantages with Rapport.

'Sapient's Helping Sapient's.' When I invoke an aspect to help a non-human sapient's roll, I grant a +3 bonus instead of +2.

Safety first! When I create an aspect by following documented safety guidelines, I get an extra free invoke on it.

Mad (Scientist's) Dog (megastunt).

- Cunning Disguise. Provided I keep my mouth shut, I get +2 to Deceive when pretending to be a normal dog. Weakness: it's hard for me to not correct people when they're wrong.
- Heightened Animal Senses. Absolutely more alert (Notice) than a human. Weakness: no thumbs.

Possible stunts to pick up:

- The Wheels of Bureaucracy Grind at My Behest. I get +2 when using Provoke to create advantages representing my ability to bury people in red tape.
- Sorry about that, eh. You can use Rapport to defend against mental attacks.
- Go for the Throat. When I invoke one of my opponent's aspects or consequences in a mental conflict, I get a +3 bonus instead of +2.
- Bad Dog. When I take a consequence, I get a free invoke on an aspect of my choice.
- I Know the System. I can use Contacts to overcome bureaucratic obstacles.

- Freedom of Information Act Request Form. I can use Contacts during a brainstorm, provided I can interface with a bureaucracy.
