Please write a short biography of about 50-100 words for all authors. This should include concise information about the person, research, and affiliations. Please try to keep it as general as possible so that it will stay up to date for as long as possible.

Examples of short biographies can be found on the In-Mind home page by clicking on an author's linked name. Feel free to include your Twitter/X handle!

Please send us one freely usable image in as high quality as possible for all authors. Images should be in landscape format.

- Please send your images as separate files, not embedded in this text document.*
- Please name your images "last name author1", "last name author2", etc.*
- We accept the following image file types: jpg, jpeg, png, gif*

TITLE

INSERT HERE

- Choose a descriptive title and tailor it to your audience. Readers should be able to tell from the title whether the article is relevant to them.*
- It is best to include keywords at the beginning of the title (for search engine optimization).*
- The title should be short and meaningful.*

TEASER/SUMMARY

Instead of a scientific abstract, we ask for a short teaser. The teaser should be 3-4 sentences or about 30-50 words long and should arouse interest in the article. It should be understandable without reading the text. Examples of teasers can be found at the top of each In-Mind Magazine article.

SEARCH ENGINE OPTIMIZATION

Many of our readers find our content because they are searching for psychological topics on the Internet. Your future article will be listed next to "competing" search results. You can (partially) control how your article appears in the search results. What appears in the search results is called a "snippet".

The first part of the snippet is the title. This is truncated after a maximum of 70 characters (55-65 characters are ideal). It is therefore recommended to formulate a meaningful snippet title. This can replace the actual title if it is too long to be displayed in the search results.

For example:

Original title: "When kids get angry: How kids learn to manage their emotions".

Snippet title: "How kids learn to deal with anger".

INSERT SNIPPET-TITEL

The second part of the snippet is the description, which is below the snippet title. This is usually truncated at 160 characters (up to 200 is possible). An ideal description explains the content and promises an answer to what searchers want to learn during their online search.

Example snippet description: "How do children learn to deal with emotions like anger, and what strategies are helpful? Psychologist Dr. Otterpohl explains."

Main text

Please keep the following points in mind when writing your In-Mind article:

- In-Mind magazine articles are generally review articles, not reports of original data.
- Please note that the primary audience for In-Mind articles is the interested layperson. This means that they should be written in simple language without using a lot of technical terms.
- Write about the content, not about the authors or researchers. Lay readers are not interested in how scientists spend their days ("author x conducted a study that"; "author y showed that"), but in what was done and with what results. Authors belong in parentheses at the end of the sentence. For example, "False confessions occur more often under condition x than under condition y (author, year)".
- We recommend these excellent writing tips from Simons and Gernsbacher.
- End the article with a clear summary or outlook that tells readers what they should take away from the article.
- Length: about 1500-2000 words*
- Maximum of 15 references
- Please be sure to follow the current APA guidelines (double-spaced, Times New Roman, font size 12, etc.). Free summaries of the APA guidelines can be found on the Internet, e.g. here
- Please use IEEE style for your references.
- Please use gender-neutral language

Pictures

- Please attach 3-5 images or pictures separately to your submission.
- Please indicate which of the images you would like us to use for the ad. This is the image that will be displayed when your article is previewed.
- Please use only images that you own the rights to or have permission (license) to use. Please send us a copy of the written permission for our records (e.g. screenshot of the order).
- Freely available images can be easily found on the following portals and do not require a license check:
 - o Pixabay (<https://pixabay.com/>)
 - o Unsplash (<https://unsplash.com/>)
 - o Pexels (<https://www.pexels.com/de-de/>)
- For all other websites that provide images under Creative Commons licenses (e.g. Shutterstock, Flickr, Wikicommons), the licenses do not grant unconditional free use, so an individual review is required. Therefore, we ask you to primarily use the above mentioned portals to ensure the non-violation of third party rights.
- IMPORTANT: Authors are solely responsible for the selection of their images and take full responsibility for the non-violation of third party rights.
- Please name your images "Image_1", "Image_2", etc.
- When submitting your images, please send them as separate image files, not embedded in this text document.
- The following image file types are acceptable: jpg, jpeg, png, gif.
- Please provide a separate title and source for each image. For portals (see above), please provide a direct link to the image. A link to the provider's general website is not sufficient.

GLOSSARY ENTRIES

- In-Mind has a glossary of (psychological) terms. Please check your contribution to see if it contains interesting terms that should be explained in a glossary entry.
- For each term you want to explain in the glossary, first check the existing glossary to see if there might already be corresponding entries: <https://www.in-mind.org/glossary>
- Please avoid duplications in the glossary
