

ERASMUS

This is Dr. Erasmus, reporting from the spacecraft enroute to Planet 15-DS3. I've done an inspection on the submarine The Orpheus. Everything is in working order and I don't see many problems arising. It's a very well designed submarine. As much as I'd hate to admit it, Crawford did a good job. He was the fucking head of engineering for a reason. Speaking of, I don't understand why he even asked me to join him on this mission. He's an engineer. He doesn't need me. Then again... well I've seen him fix things before. He doesn't always have the best techniques. Regardless, everything is up to code, up to date. Everything is fine and I'm shutting this off. This is the last time I can check in with my student back on Earth. I've left them in charge of a lot down there. I didn't believe they were ready to join me on this mission, but I did however trust them enough to handle my position for me while I'm gone. Let's hope they don't fuck it up. Or ruin my filing system.