ABSTRACT

The abstract should concisely describe the essence of the entire paper. It should include the background, purpose, methods, main findings, and important conclusions/implications. The abstract needs to be written clearly, concisely, and informatively so readers can quickly understand the core of the paper. The abstract should be 150-250 words long and accompanied by 3-5 keywords.

PENDAHULUAN

The introduction aims to present the context/background of community service, identify the gap/problem raised, explain the community service objectives and goals, and provide a brief overview of the approach used. This section is important to communicate the significance and motivation behind the study. Additionally, the introduction section should include the theories/concepts used.

METHODE

The methods section explains in detail the procedures, techniques, instruments, and steps taken in conducting community service. The description must be clear and detailed enough so that the community service can be replicated by others. It should cover the community service design, objects/subjects, community service activity stages, expected outputs, and validation or verification methods for community service.

RESULT AND DISCUSSION

This section presents the main findings of the community service, whether in the form of quantitative or qualitative data. The results are presented objectively, then analyzed and discussed by linking them to the issues of the objects/subjects and methods. The discussion focuses on interpreting the meaning and implications of the community service findings.

CONCLUSION

The conclusion summarizes the answers to the community service questions/objectives based on the obtained results. This section needs to convey key points, contributions, limitations of the community service, and recommendations for further activities. The conclusion must be consistent with the findings and not present new information not discussed previously. The conclusion should be presented in paragraph form.

REFERENCES

The reference list includes all reference sources cited in the community service article such as books, journals, websites, etc. that are recent (within the last 10 years). Citations and the reference list must follow the APA 7th edition style guidelines and be arranged alphabetically. References serve as evidence of literature review and scientific accountability.
