Chapter 1 Introduction
The background of the study is well-established the current situation of the problem viewed internationally and locally. It should be able to present evidence that suggests that there is a problem to investigate.	Background of the Study, Introduction
The gap in the literature was presented, discussed, and related to the fact there is the need to conduct of the study. (Refer to Jacobs, 2011; Miller-Bloch & Kranz, 2014 and Miles, 2017 regarding the 7 types of Gaps).	Introduction
The research questions or objectives are clear, specific and consistent with the technical terms used in the research. Furthermore, the researcher communicated the goal of the research.	Research Questions, Hypothesis (Optional: if inferential stats were used)
The researcher presented how they will measure the variables of their research and can prove that it is appropriate.	Research Questions
The literature review presents a sufficient of at least 5 number of related literature and studies.	Literature Review
The literature presented a theoretical background on the procedures, variables, and evidence of success on the proposed solution or parts of the solution.	Literature Review
Conceptual framework summarizes the theory to application through its paradigm and proposed solutions. (Conceptual framework is the practicality of the solution, theoretical framework is the knowledge that guarantees the success)	Conceptual Framework (with Paradigm)
Chapter 2 Methodology
The research design is appropriate to the goal of the research i.e. to compare outcomes->causal comparative.	Research Design
The selection process of the participants in the study is scientifically and statistically discussed i.e. sample size is calculated using Yamane formula or Conchrane's, selection was described etc. Otherwise, it showed a comprehensive way of how the setups are scientifically selected.	Research Respondents/Participants/Setups (for non-human participants)
The instruments are well-defined and appropriate for measuring the necessary variables. It shows how it is used, administered, and collects the necessary data as intended.	Research Instruments
The procedures for data gathering shows detailed steps on how to reach their research goals.	Data Gathering Procedures,
The statistical procedures is appropriate to process the data needed to answer the research goal. Otherwise, the thematic analysis is appropriate with the research design presented.	Statistical Treatment
