

YouTube:

Cure Dolly - this channel is the most useful channel ever, please consider using their course!!

Japanese Ammo With Misa - great grammar explanations and practices, very entertaining lessons, native speaker

Miku Real Japanese - similar to Misa, slightly less detail, native speaker from Osaka (has stuff about Kansai dialect!)

日本語の森 - haven't watched much but is in Japanese for immersion

JapanesePod101 - loads of content, good for beginners/practice, kinda pretentious but Risa is funny

Dogen - very advanced, in Japanese with subtitles, kinda annoying but he's cool

Natalia Natchan - American vlogger but does videos mostly in Japanese, has videos about Japan and related topics

Learn Japanese with Shota Sensei - idk this dude much but he's got decent videos

Michiyo Wojnovich - never watched his videos but he explains Genki stuff

Kanji Link - I like this dude, very good explanations for verbs but not loads of detail

Learn Japanese online with BondLingo - idk him but seems decent

Japanese with Yuka 101 - pretty good, lessons in Japanese

Dictionaries:

Jisho - like any old dictionary, has examples and stroke orders

Akebi - it's my favourite ever app, it's basically like jisho but an app and it's so much more aesthetically pleasing than any other app, also has stuff for learning kanji and flashcards

OJAD - pitch accent dictionary, kinda 2007

Grammar list - u can search grammar and it gives explanation + example, kinda bland but cute and useful

Wasabi - haven't used it but it has grammar explanations

Courses/Lessons:

Samidori - multiple languages including Jpn, suited to ur level, free!!!

Minato - loads of courses + some run through separate websites, FREE!!!!, culture stuff too, very good I like it especially the Marugoto ones, beginner to intermediate

にほんご123 - very simple grammar lessons from beginner to intermediate, example videos, vocab flashcards, listening practice, kinda basic tho not very in depth but i love it

Marshallyin - totally free and no ads, haven't used it yet but planning to, seems extremely good, different levels to choose from, looks very good should try it

Tae Kim - grammar from very beginner to advanced, best for grammar not vocabulary

NHK - kinda lame and confusing but it's kinda cute and fun, good for beginners, has loads of languages so if English is hard use this!!

JapanesePod101 - very useful, costs money, has Japanese lessons and culture lessons so that's cool, just make new accounts and get loads of free trials, it's better on a computer

FluentU - costs money but they seem to have free articles so read those

GPB - looks suitable for beginners

Imabi - basically a Tae Kim copy but seems better and easier to understand

Tim Sensei's Corner - the website looks like it's from 1999 but it has loads of lessons, good for finding grammar explanations

Genki Study Resources - idk it's good if u have the genki textbook (i don't), probably still useful even if u don't have the textbook
this article - most of it costs money tho and i'm poor

Stuff for practice:

DMM - lots of articles on Japanese culture in Japanese, supports loads of languages, good for learning vocabulary on different topics

WaniKani - haven't used it but i heard it's good, seems kinda convoluted

Mainichi - not much to say but it seems good

NHK Easy News - easy articles, has furigana, idk it's very good tho

Matcha - very easy to read articles, furigana, basically nhk easy news but it's cuter

Easy Japanese Stories - kinda 2010 website, very beginner reading practice, lame but it's nice enough

Bilibili - it's a chinese website but i use it to watch arashi stuff so good listening practise and i guess if you know chinese you can read the subtitles, it usually has japanese subtitles too

Online Japanese Tests - all just tests, it's in japanese which is cool, quite good imo

Random useful stuff:

Self Taught Japanese - blog, loads of explanations, kinda existential and annoying, good detail though i like it

NihongoEな - this has soooo many websites on all different parts of japanese, literally everything u could ever need so use this website, it has EVERYTHING seriously everything even the unheard of 2005 websites, I LOVE IT

Internet Archive - basically a website to pirate any books, search for whatever Japanese textbooks u want and u can find them, useful for other topics too if u want so do check it out

This benny dude - he has stuff for lot's of languages but search for his Japanese stuff, lots of good articles and even more resources if u want more

Conjugator - test verb conjugations, not all real conjugations, has a timer so good practice
