

The Time Traveler

The Time Machine is an interesting, charismatic, and generally charming book. The main character, The Time Traveler, is incredibly unique and has his own personality. The Time Traveler has a unique personality. In this essay, The Time Traveler's personality will be determined.

The Time Traveler is smart. The Time Traveler himself is incredibly smart, because he invented the entirety of the time machine on his own. In the novel, "The Time Machine," it states, "The Medical Man got up out of his chair and peered into the thing. "It's beautifully made," he said. "It took two years to make," retorted the time traveler. Then, when we had all imitated the action the Medical Man had made, he said: "Now, I want you all to clearly understand that this lever here, being pressed over, sends the machine gliding into the future, and this other reverses the motion. This information is important, because it shows how the Time Traveler is incredibly smart, and was able to build the entirety of the Time Machine on his own. Furthermore, it shows his almost astounding charisma, because the Machine was not only just built, but also works, as he explained by it going into the future and past.

The Time Traveler is a status character. The Time Traveler is a status character, because he does not change throughout the story. In the novel, The Time Traveler, it states, "The Time Traveler vanished three years ago, and, as everyone knows, has never returned." This information is important because it shows how like at the beginning of the book, when the time traveler vanishes and turns out to have gone through time into the future, he vanishes once again at the very end of the book, showing how his character has not changed very much. Furthermore, this shows how he keeps using his time machine, despite what has happened when he did it in the past.

The Time Traveler is observant. The Time Traveler is observant, because he often pays attention to small details. In the novel, The Time Machine, it states, “But I made a sudden motion to warn them when I saw their little pink hands feeling the time machine. Happily then, when it was not too late, I thought of the hitherto forgotten, and reaching over the bars of the machine, swiftly unscrewed the levers that set the machine in motion.” This information is important, because it shows how the Time Traveler is very observant, because he noticed the little people touching the machine, and quickly unscrewed the levers before they could damage it or accidentally turn it on. Furthermore, the Time Traveler is being attentive by noticing what they were doing and quickly thought of an idea to stop them.

Finally, in this essay, The Time Traveler's personality has been determined: The Time Traveler is smart. the Time Traveler is a status character, the Time Traveler is observant. The Time Traveler is an interesting character because of his unique personality, and traits. All of these things are important because those are what make him, him.