Cosmetic surgery improves a person's appearance by repairing damaged face tissue and rejuvenating the skin. It is a type of plastic surgery that improves and reshapes the body's structures in order to boost self-confidence. Plastic surgery is a type of surgery that focuses on repairing, reconstructing, or changing the appearance of the human body.

The rise in the demand for minimally invasive and non-invasive procedures will act as major driver accelerating the cosmetic surgery and services market's growth rate. Another significant factor resulting in the expansion of market is the swift improvement in cosmetic treatment procedures. Furthermore, surging awareness and technological advancement in cosmetic surgery techniques are the major drivers that will enhance the growth of market. Likewise, upsurge in the number of geriatric population as it will increase the demand for anti-aging cosmetic and aesthetic treatments will show positive impact on the market's growth rate. Growing healthcare infrastructure, rapid urbanisation and rise in the level of disposable incomes in developing and developed countries will influence the growth rate of cosmetic surgery and services market.

On the other hand, high cost of aesthetic usages and implantable medical devices and complications involved with cosmetic treatment are factors that will obstruct the market growth. Also, the dearth of favourable reimbursement scenario and strict government regulations will challenge the cosmetic surgery and services market. However, lack of healthcare professionals and the less awareness will act as restrain and further impede the growth rate of market.
