

I've been thinking a lot lately. When I first took over Valor I had no plan, no roadmap and really no goals or expectations for it. Quite honestly i had no idea what the fuck i was doing. But as the days passed and the shows went by and the community grew as did I with it. It became so much more than I ever thought it could be and that's a testament to everyone's hard work. I'm rather proud of what it has become, The staple of twitter-fedding which has become more and more popular and prominent. I say this all this to say that I think I've accomplished all I can accomplish with it. With a combination of real life stuff and the fact that I just don't have the drive anymore. That isn't fair to my roster or to myself so it's with a lot of thought and care in the decision that I am closing Pro Wrestling Valor as of September 25th (Our final show.)

It's been a hell of a run for the past two years and i cant think of a better way to close it out than with the XWF vs Valor angle that comes to a close at the Relentless PPV in a couple weeks and then BEDLAM 10 to follow directly behind it where we have all of our top talents fighting to become the final PWV Champion(s) in its storied history and send us out with a bang!

To everyone that has been involved from the very beginning even before me all the way to those that are a part of the current roster and final show, I thank you for the wild ride that we've all been on.

I hope I did right by you these last two years and were able to offer you some form of entertainment to distract you from your real lives. If I was able to do that for even one person then my time here was a success!

I love all of ya'll.

See you at Relentless & Bedlam 10 for the Final Hurrah!
