

This is designed to help you follow along as you watch episodes of Girls Planet 999. I hope you find it helpful. I personally cannot recognize the girls from their official photos -- they always look so different in their performances. I tried to find shots that sort of captured what they looked like in the performance, but in the end I had to just sort of do my best with what they gave us.

For screenshots from Ep 5, I tried hard to find ones that don't make it completely obvious if they survived or not. A lot of them look sad or happy in their pictures but don't assume anything from that, because some of them look sad and ultimately make it, and some of them look happy but for some other reason. So you never know! If they really looked basically the same I didn't bother getting a screenshot.

I recommend that you make a copy of this for yourself so you can do whatever you want with it! You may want to set the view → zoom to 125% or 150%. Also, I recommend that you go to "view" and make sure "Print layout" is unchecked.

- Cells are listed in reverse order of the voting as revealed in the third episode.
- The "Rank" listed is the original rank, revealed in the first two episodes.
- By "audition" I mean the performance they did in the first two episodes.
- I'm also including information on the vote that came in with episode 3. Cells with less than 1% of the vote have red headers; cells with between 1% and 10% of the vote have yellow headers; cells with 11+% of the vote have green headers.
- Many cells got less than 1% of the vote. For example, 0.2% means 2 out of every 1000.
- Note that I'm combining all the votes and not weighting them the way the show does, so sometimes the ranking of the cell may seem out of order, but that's because the cell might be comparatively more or less popular in Korea or internationally. You can use both the current ranking and the percent of the vote to get a sense of the cell's popularity as of episode 3.
- Cells of teams that won the benefit will have a faint green wash throughout.
- Cells of teams that won the 3x benefit will have the same faint tint but will be marked in the header.
- Top9 trainees (from the original top 9) are marked with purple fill.
