Pre-Episode Discussion

Email from Jim Tormey:

"Once again, thanks for your podcast. Theologically speaking, I find we are in great agreement. In your recent podcast, you said something you have said before. That if Austin Metcalf had been disciplined, he might not have taken on Karmelo. I agree. But where was he going to be disciplined? The church in America has long abandoned true discipleship. I would even say there is no understanding of this at all. In the UMC it is constantly being said we are to make disciples. The problem is we don't know what that means, The church growth movement destroyed any semblance of discipleship. We see discipleship as get them saved and putting them to work, "parking cars." We have failed to properly do what we, the church, are called to do. Which is to walk alongside those who come to confess Jesus as Lord. This takes effort and time. I, unfortunately, have done the same. But this is about to change where I currently serve. I will begin mentoring a young married man on how to work on sanctification. I have attached a paper I have written about this. If you have time to read it, great; if not, no worries. I love you, my brother in Him."

Episode Outline

Hook -

Daren, what does the movie Sinners, the Book of Genesis and the tragedy at Astroworld have in common? The stronghold of media and entertainment on the minds of Christians is something that needs to be addressed. I recently watched the documentary of Travis Scott's Astroworld Festival and it was definitely made for Netflix.

Emotional Impact and Empathy: Historyglow.net (The Effect of Entertainment: Shaping Minds Emotions and Society. 2023)

"One of the most potent effects of entertainment is its ability to evoke emotions and create empathy. Engaging with entertaining content triggers emotional responses, ranging from laughter and joy to fear, sadness, and empathy for characters' struggles."

Mindset Matters: The Influence of Entertainment and the Significance of Culture Change in the Business of a New Decade Forbes.com (2019)

There has been no greater disseminator of culture in the history of humankind than that of the entertainment industry. From the media business that includes film, television, advertising to video games, the industry has provided the mode to not only define trends, shape culture but influence our identities in the most profound ways. It is because of this very influence, that the industry itself must be very cognizant of both the power it wields and the value it holds on the everyday lives of people and society

Modern, Real-world Examples. We are being manipulated to feel a certain way regarding

1. Ethnic divisions
2. Homosexuality
3. Christianity

Exploration/Development - SINNERS Movie

Delve into specific examples of popular TV shows and movies that exhibit themes of propaganda or ideological messaging, and analyze their impact on audience attitudes.

Sinners Movie

- a. Ethnic Division
- b. Anti-Christian Sentiment
- c. Occultism packaged as ethnic pride/heritage

WHAT DID WE LIKE ABOUT THE FILM?

Climax/Key Moment - ASTROWORLD and the Invitation Made to Hell

Does everyone remember the AstroWorld tragedy? A music festival hosted by Travis Scott where over 300 people were injured and 8 people passed away.

- a. The Netflix Documentary doesn't address the immediate feedback from concert goers. It only addresses the logistical nightmare that it was. There was something SERIOUSLY lacking from the documentary. (timestamp 9:37 - <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1WOEQPacCjQ&list=LL>)
- b. The scene in the Movie Sinners where "music awakens spirits"
- c. Travis Scott's Stage design, message (see you on the other side), phoenix, and portal. Also, the testimonies of video watchers
- d. Mount Hermon

Conclusion/Summary - Read Ephesians 5

- a. The sexual revolution is just that, a revolt against the creator of sex. It was staged and carried out. It isn't organic, only insofar as the sin that dwells in man is there when he is born.

- b. The black entitlement, sexual licentiousness, and now apostasy is contrived.

 - a. Roald Dahl's Views: According to Dahl's autobiography, Boy: Tales of Childhood, a friend named Michael was viciously caned by headmaster Geoffrey Fisher. Writing in that same book, Dahl reflected: "All through my school life I was appalled by the fact that masters and senior boys were allowed literally to wound other boys, and sometimes quite severely... I

- couldn't get over it. I never have got over it."^[40] Fisher was later appointed Archbishop of Canterbury, and he crowned Queen Elizabeth II in 1953. However, according to Dahl's biographer Jeremy Treglown,^[41] the caning took place in May 1933, a year after Fisher had left Repton; the headmaster was in fact J. T. Christie, Fisher's successor as headmaster. Dahl said the incident caused him to "have doubts about religion and even about God".^[42] He viewed the brutality of the caning as being the result of the headmaster's enmity towards children, an attitude Dahl would later attribute to the Grand High Witch in his dark fantasy The Witches, with the novel's main antagonist exclaiming that "children are rrrreee-volting
