My Response to Nasty

Hello, I wanted to make a public statement to the Smash Twitch Streamer Super Nasty about the Truman Show video that took place on the 14th. I've taken some time to not rush a response because I wanted to reflect on what occurred a bit to try and make a thoughtful response.

I have always found whenever content creators take a concept for a video too far and hurt another individual's feelings extremely immature and stupid. I genuinely hate how I've contributed to that as well the other night.

I wanted to create a video where I gathered some friends and run a fake Smash tournament similar to the TrumanShow, have gags like

1. Everyone is overly nice

2. Everyone mentions how beautiful the weather is

3. Our fake streamer will put smash tournament ads in the arena titles, and say random ad rolls mid matches

4. Everyone plays like really poorly on purpose

5. And have people join the stream arena with names to tip off “Truman”

6. Then make a big reveal and gift some subs

But where I feel I SEVERELY messed up and crossed the line was including a very notable player to lose to him on purpose. That is just simply unacceptable, and I hadn't thought of the implications until after the set had ended and saw his reaction and it all kinda hit me and I felt genuinely awful.

I'm not going to hide behind the fact it was a “joke” or an “experiment” for a video.

It wasn't my intention to make Super Nasty feel embarrassed or shame him. My intentions were to hopefully create a tournament where we pulled some gags akin to the movie but I SEVERELY made some missteps in the process and ended up hurting a genuine and good person in the process

But having good intentions doesn't automatically mean that every decision I made was okay. There's ABSOLUTELY no excuse for what happened.

I've reached out privately to Super Nasty and some other members to sincerely apologize and hopefully find a path forward with time. If not I completely understand, I also want to extend an apology to his community as a whole.

I am extremely disappointed in myself. I feel awful about how the night ended, the things that happened, how I made him feel, and how it was a very bad experience for Nasty

I have scrapped all the footage of the night and absolutely will not upload anything to do with it. Moving forward I'm going to use this as a learning opportunity to just do better as a member in this community and as a person. I want to make things that uplift my friends and fellow community members not hurt them.
