

Honolulu, Prostitutes, and the Occult Underground

Bush era

Cost: Nothing, besides Self tests, police raids, inevitable violent customers...

Ritual Action: Charge $3 for three minutes of sex. Set up three rooms. Rotate between them in sequence, fucking a customer in each one - giving the Johns in the other two time to enter and undress before the act, put their clothes and leave after.

The actual sex and gender of the participants is irrelevant, but the ritual operator must play the female role and the Johns must present as male.

Effect: For as long as the rule of threes is maintained (three dollars, three minutes, three Johns in three rooms) the ritual operator is immune to harmful magick and demonic possession. The user can still suffer exhaustion, discomfort, disease, pregnancy violent customers, stress rolls from any weird shit the Johns pull...

WHAT YOU HEAR

It's unlikely that the ritual operator gets any sexual satisfaction from the Bull Pen, unless they've got a very specific free-use fetish or the Johns are extremely efficient lovers. The dollar amount is so pathetically low that it's unlikely anyone would use the ritual to safely prostitute themselves, except in poorer countries where three American dollars is a king's ransom.

The most common use of the Bull Pen is immunity while doing something else. As long as each "customer" finishes within three minutes it doesn't matter what else the ritual operator does while getting fucked. Handling possessed objects, killing someone who has a death-curse prepared, tanking a cancer curse from a smoking mage if you can somehow ensure they cast it during sex... You could even use it to make yourself invincible on the astral plane, but you'd need a way to keep your body moving while your soul no-sold attacks from predators and parasites.