

In the 1930s, Yaphank, Long Island was home to a Nazi community. At this 1937 rally, the German-American Federation reaffirmed its bylaws.

Lincoln Rockwell and followers of the American Nazi Party pose in 1961 next to the “Hate Bus,” a Volkswagen they drove around the country to spread their message.

A young boy holds up a “White Power” sign at a counter-demonstration of a civil rights march, in 1966.

Chanting “White lives matter” and “Jews will not replace us,” white nationalists and white supremacists carrying torches marched through the University of Virginia campus on August 11, 2017.

Members of the National Socialist Movement, one of the largest neo-Nazi groups in the US, hold a swastika burning on April 21, 2018, in Draketown, Georgia.