

My name is Nadia Wilson, and I am a public health and safety professional with a diverse background in military service, nursing, and case management. Originally from Ontario, I moved to Nova Scotia in 2015 to pursue a career in healthcare and public service. I served in the Canadian Forces as a Resource Management Clerk for 10 years, gaining valuable experience in financial and administrative management. After my service, I earned a Bachelor of Science in Nursing from the University of Ottawa in 2015 and transitioned into a fulfilling healthcare career.

I have worked in critical care, cardiac surgery, and public health, managing complex cases and conducting risk assessments. Currently, I serve as a Senior Nurse Consultant with the Public Health Agency of Canada, specializing in prion disease surveillance and policy development. I am bilingual, detail-oriented, and passionate about advocating for workplace fairness and advancing healthcare initiatives.

I am eager to bring my leadership skills and expertise to the Health Services Group Executive. This opportunity would allow me to contribute meaningfully to improving members' lives and advancing the broader labour movement in Canada.

At home, I enjoy life in Halifax with my husband, two daughters, and our lively pets.
